By MARY LOU VOSSMEYER
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

When Leo Stern was a teenager, he paid 25 cents to have his picture taken for three one-cent postcards. That probably was the most worthwhile two-bits he invested because he ended up on the other side of the lens — for just about the rest of his life.

Stern, a former Sedalian, eventually opened his own protrait studio in Kansas City and later produced a portrait for the Harry S. Truman postage stamp.

A master photographer in the National Association of Photographers, Stern says he has worked with photographers "from one end of the United States to the other." He taught photography for the association for 15 years and has photographed nearly every major figure in Kansas City since he opened his studio there in 1930.

The 81-year-old photographer, who returned to Sedalia Saturday for the annual Rotary Convention, reminisced briefly about his career.

Stern received his "first taste of photography" in 1910 while working with a local photographer in the Night and Day Studio, 307 South Ohio.

"I went there to have my picture taken and Joe O'Connell (studio owner) said he was looking for a boy to help carry his case. It was mainly from that start that I became interested in photography."

Stern later opened his own small studio at 111 South Ohio "until I finally had to close it up for lack of business."

Then, he went "on the road" with his portraits.

"We had novelty studios in small towns and ran them for two or three months before moving on. I did alright on the road. It was a traveling studio. But I finally came back and settled down to making a better class of pictures."

Stern, who moved to Kansas City in the mid-1920s, "always had a great love for Sedalia."

His family moved here at the turn of the century. Stern recalls being attracted by portraits when he was a youth, especially "a picture of President McKinley all draped in black cloth downtown."

Stern received little formal training in photography. What he knows about the art, he learned by doing. He attended Sedalia's Broadway Elementary School and the old Sedalia High School. But the rest of his education was acquired through experience with other photographers and through conventions.

Though he spent only 30 minutes with the former president, Stern recalls this "tidbit" of philosophy from Truman which reflects his own outlook.

"An artist is a person with infinite pains for perfection, but that applies to a bricklayer as well as anyone else."

And Stern maintained that philosophy throughout his career. "I subscribe to classic portraiture," he said. "What we have today in photography was given to us by the painter."

"There's quite a bit of a craze these days for taking pictures outside. But they're not in the term of the classical painter or photographer. It's something that has a lot of distractions involved."

He added, "I don't mean that all outdoor photography portraits aren't good. But you never see a king stradle a fence or a president leaning against an old tree. One of the rules of portraiture is that you never have anything that will detract from the subject itself."

Though Stern spent more than 50 years behind a camera, he never succumbed to the temptation of news photography.

Navy combat vessel evacuates refugees

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — President Ford informed congressional leaders Saturday that a combat-equipped Navy transport entered South Vietnamese territorial waters Thursday and picked up 1,404 refugees.

White House press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford made the notification in keeping with the spirit of the War Powers Act, aimed at barring the introduction of American military units into Southeast Asia. But he said he felt he was not required to do so in view of the humanitarian nature of the mission.

Responding to questions, Nessen said that so far as he knows the Navy vessel, the Durham, was the only U.S. Navy ship to enter Vietnamese territorial waters during the refugee evacuation effort.

Among those informed by Ford were House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., and Sen. James Eastland, D-Miss., president pro tem.

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Saturday President Ford will decide by next Thursday what America's future role should be in South Vietnam.

The secretary told a news conference at the desert White House that the military and intelligence apparatus of the nation is carefully examining the deteriorating situation in Indochina, particularly South Vietnam.

From this analysis, he said, the President will make his decision and announce it in a foreign policy address to a joint session of Congress Thursday night.

Kissinger said the decision will be based on such factors as whether the South Vietnamese Army can stabilize its defensive position, the humanitarian effort to save refugees and the potential effect of the infusion of more aid into that country.

Ford met for 90 minutes Saturday morning at his mountainside vacation home with Kissinger and the Army chief of staff, Gen. Frederick C. Weyand, who returned Friday from a weeklong trip to South Vietnam.

While Kissinger briefed reporters on the meeting, Ford played a round of golf, the fifth time he has played during his Easter vacation.

Ford, Kissinger and Weyand set up an afternoon meeting with military intelligence and supply experts.

Kissinger made these other major points in the news conference:

—The United States made no secret agreement with South Vietnam at the time of the Paris peace talks. He said the United States has a moral, not a legal, commitment to help the South Vietnamese.

—The start of the North Vietnamese offensive in the South in January came as a surprise. He said the North followed up on its initial success because the United States did not respond to help its South Vietnamese ally.

—He described the invasion, which has increased the number of North Vietnamese troops in the South from about 80,000 to about 400,000, as "an outrageous violation of the Paris peace accord."

—The United States will welcome participation from any nation in the humanitarian effort to help South Vietnamese refugees.

—He called the plan to withdraw South Vietnamese troops to more defensible positions closer to Saigon a good strategic move, but it was "poorly executed," which contributed to the panic that followed.

Kissinger said that the President also ordered a National Security Council meeting for Tuesday afternoon or Wednesday to permit Gen. Weyand to report his findings.

The President also has ordered the National Security Council staff, in close cooperation with the CIA and other agencies, to draft a statement of the various options open to the United States.

Saturday's auction action

Saturday apparently was a good day for auctions in Sedalia. At top, buyers from all parts of Missouri came to the State Fairgrounds to bid on surplus state property, ranging from Highway Patrol cars and farm machinery to 400 college desks. Meanwhile at KMOS-TV, 2100 West Broadway, the Sedalia Jaycees held their annual auction to raise money for the Children's Therapy Center. About $8,000 in items were donated by area merchants and the Jaycees hoped to raise at least $4,500. (Democrat-Capital Photos by Bill Zieres)

Armed raiding party fails to locate Patty Hearst

MENLO PARK, Calif. (AP) — An armed raiding party in search of Patricia Hearst arrested four persons and seized bomb makings and radical writings but did not find the fugitive newspaper heiress, authorities said Saturday.

Charles Bates, FBI agent in charge of the Hearst case, said the the tip that led to the Friday night apartment raid may have been just "one of those hundreds of sightings we've had." He refused to comment on any of the material seized.

A small fire which police called apparent arson broke out in the apartment Saturday morning. Police Chief Vic Cizanckas said "preliminary investigation indicates this fire was deliberately set." He said materials had been piled on a rug and doused with a flammable liquid.

News reporters said the first-floor apartment was in a shambles and the rug was charred. Chairs and lamps had been overturned and sheet music scattered on the floor. Cizanckas said, "We did not leave the place in that condition. It looked pretty good."

Cizanckas said 15 persons were in the apartment when police raided it. He said the other 11 were questioned and released.

Cizanckas refused to explain why authorities believed Miss Hearst was in the apartment, saying only: "We were told to look for certain things."

The raid on an apartment guarded by two Doberman Pinscher dogs came after "the FBI developed information that an escaped prisoner wanted for murder in Southern California was to be at the residence along with wanted person Patty Hearst," said a statement by the FBI and police.

A California prison escapee and an ex-convict, both armed, were arrested in the raid and a young man and woman were booked for investigation of harboring a fugitive.

A source close to the investigation said officers seized literature from a group calling itself the Red Guerrilla Family along with bomb materials, gas masks and night scope cameras.

The Red Guerrilla Family claimed responsibility for a bombing which damaged the 21st floor of a Standard Oil Co. of California building in San Francisco Friday night while President Ford spoke at a hotel five blocks away. There were no injuries. Authorities said they first heard of the group March 27 when it claimed responsibility for the bombing of a building in Berkeley which houses an FBI office.

Bates was with the raiding team of federal, state and local law enforcement officers. Afterwards he said they "didn't come up with anything to indicate" Miss Hearst had been there, but that it would take several days to go through the material seized.

Chiang Kai-shek

Heart attack kills Chiang Kai-shek

TAIPEI (AP) — President Chiang Kai-shek of Nationalist China, the last of the original Big Four Allied leaders of World War II, died of a heart attack Saturday night.

In his last will released two hours after his death, the 87-year-old general called for his followers to recapture the mainland from the Communists — a goal he could not achieve in his lifetime.

Doctors said Chiang suffered a heart attack at 10:20 p.m. and died at 11:50 p.m. Chiang, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin were the Big Four leaders of the Allies in the war against the Axis powers of Germany, Italy and Japan.

Officials said Chiang's American-educated wife and his 65-year-old son, Premier Chiang Ching-kuo, were at the president's bedside.

Although the constitution provides for Vice President C. K. Yen to become president, it was believed he would continue to serve mainly as a figurehead. The real power of government was expected to remain with Chiang's son, who has been ruling the country for his ailing father for the past three years.

Chiang's political will, dated March 29, 1975, said, "Just at the time when we are getting stronger, my colleagues and my countrymen, you should not forget our sorrow and our hope because of my death. My spirit will be always with my colleagues and my countrymen to fulfill the three people's principles, to recover the mainland, and to restore our national culture."

The three principles are nationalism, democracy and social well-being expounded by the late Sun Yat-sen, leader of the 1911 revolution against China's last imperial dynasty.

Chiang's will added, "I have always regarded myself as a disciple of Dr. Sun Yat-sen and also of Jesus Christ." His Christian wife had encouraged Chiang to become a Christian also and he was baptized a Methodist in 1931.

There has been speculation about what might happen to the fierce enmity between the Taipei and Peking governments once the principal figures — Chiang and 81-year-old Communist party charman Mao Tse-tung — leave the scene.

No sudden change was expected on Taiwan, with Chiang's son following the same general policies.

Chiang's wife, Madame Chiang, served at various times as her husband's adviser, confidante, ambassador, interpreter and as a government caretaker and representative. At all times she was a tireless spokeswoman for anti-Communism and the Nationalist Chinese government, and a bridge to the outside world for her retiring husband.

Chiang, who withdrew his Nationalist Chinese government to Taiwan when Communist forces took over mainland China in 1949, had not been well since he developed pneumonia in July 1972. He had remained secluded since then, turning over most day-to-day government affairs to his son.

The president's 87th birthday last Oct. 31 was marked with parties, rallies, fireworks and special television programs.

Although he did not appear in public, Chiang prepared a special message for Nationalist China's Youth Day on March 29 saying the Chinese Communists are destroying the nation's culture and ravaging the minds of people on the mainland.

Teachers may get jobless pay

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri teachers under nine month contracts probably will be eligible for summer unemployment benefits under a new federal program, according to state employment security officials.

The officials said Friday that even if a teacher on a nine-month contract continues to receive a monthly check in the summer months and has signed a renewal contract for the following fall, he or she still could be eligible for the funds.

"If they have a contract for 12 months, they wouldn't be eligible because they'd have a salary," said John Meystrik, chief of the state's employment security division.

"But if they have a contract for only nine months, they would qualify. So what we're going to do is handle it on an individual basis."

About 90 per cent of the state's teachers are on nine month contracts, but still receive paychecks over a 12 month period rather than just during the nine month contract period, according to the Missouri State Teachers Association, which represents about 42,000 of the state's 52,000 teachers.

"The fact that they are being paid for 12 months doesn't necessarily disqualify them from receiving the benefits," said Joseph Dietrich of the employment division.

Ammunition limit is opposed

A gun-control proposal by means of limiting ammunition for handguns met with strong opposition from readers who responded to last Sunday's Democrat-Capital Survey. Of the 26 responses received, 61 per cent opposed the idea. None of those in favor offered a comment.

The question was: "The Consumer Product Safety Commission is considering a proposal to ban the distribution of ammunition for use in all handguns except those held by police officers, licensed security guards, the military and licensed pistol clubs. Based on what you know, would you favor such a regulation?"

W. G. Doyle, Smithton, wrote, "The proposal is absurd. It is also a clear violation of Second Amendment guarantees. New York, New Jersey and several other over-populated states and cities have shown us what folly gun control is. The Sullivan Law is used only against law-abiding citizens and is the best ally a criminal in New York has. The only solution to the problem of violent crimes is a program of mandatory prison sentences for crimes in which firearms are used..."

Carl A. Johnson, no address given, wrote, "I am opposed to the proposed ban on pistol ammunition because: (1) Responsible citizens should not be denied the right of hunting and target shooting; (2) Some pistol ammunition is also used in long guns; (3) Even the elimination of handguns would not reduce crime, but, in my opinion, criminals would be more aggressive knowing victims would be helpless to resist; (4) Criminals can easily get the guns and ammunition by robbing armories, police stations, policemen or by buying from smugglers, gun runners or from small back-yard manufacturers."

A. H. Scrimager, 1216 East 14th, said, "We have very good gun laws. All we need to do is get behind our law enforcing agencies. Let them know they are doing a good job for their community. Criticize the courts for their failure to deal out proper justice. We don't need a new law every time someone commits a crime. There has been entirely too much leniency from the courts, just because someone knows someone. Let's deal out all social influence and stop all this poppycock about gun laws."

And Loyd Gehlken, 711 West Sixth, wrote, "I am against any ammunition or handgun control. All people should have protection of a gun in their home. Taking ammunition or handguns from people ... wouldn't be freedom. That is just what a robber or thief would like to see ..."

A couple who asked not to be identified wrote, "We are not in favor of the ban of ammunition, except in a few cases. The enemy will manage somehow to obtain ammunition for their evil, law-breaking purposes by stealing or otherwise. Also, what protection will law-abiding citizens have if all protection is taken from them? The best plan would be to have strong laws of punishment..."

And finally this unsigned note: "Since law officers can do little to stop crime, all (people) need their own guns to protect home if possible. May we retain our guns and ammunition if needed."

Rules bingo is legal in some private clubs

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Gambling bingo games may be conducted in country clubs and Class A private clubs, Atty. Gen. Curt Schneider ruled Friday.

Many legislators believed that the bingo law passed earlier this session would not permit the clubs to play bingo.

The law stated that nonprofit fraternal, veterans, religious, charitable and education organizations could have bingo licenses.

Schneider ruled that the definition of nonprofit is so broad that country clubs and Class A private clubs, which are non-profit in theory, qualify.

Some legislators said Friday that they would like to see new legislation to outlaw bingo in the clubs.

The state Revenue Department, which administers the law and licenses the organizations, had requested the opinion in response to inquiries by clubs.

As of Friday McDonald had issued licenses to 376 organizations at a cost of $25 each.

Tulsa man arraigned on stealing charges

A Tulsa, Okla., man was arraigned in Pettis County Magistrate Court Friday for stealing property valued at more than $50.

Johnny Wayne Smithee, 29, was arrested in Warsaw Thursday night on a Pettis County warrant, and brought to Pettis County Friday.

Smithee allegedly took 65 used truck tires from Jim's Tire Service, South Highway 65, Tuesday night. He reportedly tried to buy some tires from James Crystal, owner of the business, earlier Tuesday.

Smithee's bond was set at $3,500 and his preliminary hearing was set for April 15.

Forgery charges also were filed late Friday afternoon in Magistrate Court against Lloyd O'Nell, 23, Omaha, Neb.

O'Nell was arrested by Sedalia police at 12:35 p.m. Friday and transferred to the county jail at 2:50 p.m.

O'Nell had in his possession four $1 money orders that he allegedly altered to $81.

He remains in the county jail in lieu or $3,500 bond.

Six killed by bombs in Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Terrorist bombs exploded in two Belfast pubs Saturday, killing at least six persons and injuring about 70, police said.

In the first bombing, a young blonde woman hurled an explosive in a gas cylinder through the door of McLaughlin's bar, used mainly by Roman Catholics, as patrons gathered around the television set to watch the Grand National Horse Race.

It killed two persons and injured about 15, police said. A bartender said the blast blew three people across the floor and into another rooms.

A short time later a bomb went off in a pub frequented mostly by Protestants — the Mountainview bar in Shankill Road. Police said at least four persons were killed in that explosion and about 55 injured.

No group immediately claimed responsibility for either blast.

A police spokesman said investigators suspected that the second blast was in retaliation for the first, which was itself almost identical to an explosion at a Protestant pub one year ago.

The explosions were the most serious incident to mar a ceasefire begun by the Irish Republican Army on Feb. 10.

"I saw one customer who had his head blown completely off," said a rescue worker who arrived at McLaughlin's moments after the blast.

Two patrons from McLaughlin's died on the way to the hospital, and police said one of the injured was seriously hurt.

Witnesses told security forces the woman who threw the explosive and then escaped in a waiting car.

Customer helps stop robbery at local store

An attempted robbery was thwarted Friday afternoon by an employe of Ashley's Outlet Store, Thompson Hills Shopping Center.

According to the store manager, a customer noticed a man, about 20, going to the office at the rear of the building.

An employe went to the office and found the man standing by the safe. The unidentified man ran past the employe and out of the store.

According to the police, the safe was closed but its handle was not in a locked position.

The manager said the man was armed, however, an employe said she saw no weapon.

No money was taken from the store by the young man. The would-be robber apparently was alone in his attempt, police said.

In other police news, an undetermined amount of gasoline was taken from a truck after 5 p.m. Thursday on the Howard Truck and Equipment Co. lot, 3110 West Broadway.

The truck is owned by Sedalia Cold Storage, 320 West Main.

The right door of the truck was found open about 9 a.m. Friday. The right wing glass had been broken, valued at $30. A citizens band radio in the truck cab was reported loose but not taken.

He's heard it before

The words of Dr. Mouzon Biggs failed to interrupt the art work of his four-year-old son Jason, during the Rotary banquet Friday night at Ramada Inn. Young Jason borrowed a pen and a program to amuse himself while his father addressed the crowd of about 250 persons. The Methodist minister urged Rotarians to renew their spirits and give of themselves to attain "true selfhood." (Democrat Capital photo by Tom Maupin)

Speakers support 'spirit' of Rotary

Meeting in Sedalia for the second night of the Rotary District 607 conference, at the Ramada Inn, Rotarians and their wives were told to stand up for America and be counted.

Speaker Dave Smith, Rotary representative from Austin, Tex., told the 200-plus crowd that American apathy could destroy the democracy of the country, as it has killed other societies.

"You can start right now as Rotarians to insure another 200 years for this, the greatest country on the face of the earth," Smith said.

The organization prides itself on service to others and Smith, a member since 1961, said every Rotarian should rededicate himself to the spirit of the organization to help build a better world.

Smith said the country started with people who had nothing, not even security from attack. Through hard work and dedication, the United States grew to the leading country of the world.

"We have fed and clothed most of the other countries of the world," Smith said, due to America's industrial knowledge.

"To some a businessman making a profit is sinful," he said. "The word 'capitalist' has become a four letter word to some of our young people."

Again attacking apathy, Smith said "the American dream is tarnished and patriotism is something to be ashamed of. The Bill of Rights, if put to a vote today, would probably be defeated by the voters because of apathy."

Many feel "public office ought to be held by someone else and then they don't trust the elected either," Smith said.

Smith also advised his fellow Rotarians not to fear being labeled a "square" for their willingness to have responsibility to their country and their "fellow man."

Highlighting the convention Friday night was an address by the Rev. Dr. Mouzon Biggs, pastor of the Trinity Methodist Church of Beaumont, Tex. The occasion was the New Spirit banquet, attended by 235 Rotarians and their wives at the Ramada Inn.

Dr. Biggs drew most of his talk from American poet and writer Robert Penn Warren, author of "All the King's Men," who maintained that selfhood is brought about by losing yourself and moving out to others.

"Only as we lose the self, do we gain true selfhood," Dr. Biggs said.

The motto of Rotary is "service above self" and Dr. Biggs asked his audience, "How many of you are willing to lose yourself?"

The minister told the group his talk may sound "preachery" but his intention was not to preach but to give the audience something "heavy" to think about.

The Rotarians also were told that renewing their spirit would mean they would have to make decisions. What the decisions are, Dr. Biggs did not say, but he continued that every generation has to make decisions for itself.

Dr. Biggs said every generation "is not born innocent and ready to start where their fathers left off. Every generation is capable of a Hitler, of horrible crimes," he said.

Nor can the problems of "our so-called western civilization" be solved solely by education.

He said the recognition of necessity is the beginning of freedom. To illustrate this he described a person with a drinking problem. He had told the woman, "Nobody in the world can make you sick unless you let them," and only she could heal herself of the drinking problem by seeing the need to be free of it.

Dr. Biggs closed his talk with the story of a small child who tried talking with his mother while she was scrubbing the floor. The mother told the child she was too busy and would talk when she finished and stood up. The child replied, "but then you'll be too tall."

"When you get too tall for the littlest among you," Dr. Biggs said, "then you are too tall."

Preceding the main speaker Sedalia Mayor Jerry Jones welcomed the Rotarians and said, "This is the biggest crowd I've seen in Sedalia since last July." (A reference to the Ozark Music Festival held at the State Fairgrounds.) "Thank the Lord it's not the same crowd."

Jones presented a plaque of the city seal to Rotary District 607 Governor A. B. Case, 700 South Carr.

Entertainment for the evening was provided by the Madrigal Singers of Central Missouri State University.

Iowa man arrested on auto theft charges

An Iowa man was arrested Friday night in Sedalia by the Highway Patrol in connection with an automobile theft, a felony.

Arnold R. Hatcher, 28, Council Bluff, Iowa, was arrested on an Iowa warrant. The car was reportedly stolen in Iowa, but it was not known when.

According to Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, Hatcher waived extradition Saturday morning and will be picked up by Iowa authorities Sunday afternoon. He is in the Pettis County jail.

Local service station reports break-in

An undetermined amount of money was taken from the Derby Service Station and Cafe, North Highway 65, before 7 a.m. Saturday.

The Pettis County Sheriff's department said windows were broken to gain entry to the buildings. The money was taken from vending machines, which had been forced open.

Diver locates body in creek near Joplin

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) — A diver found the body of Robert Stubblefield, 55, Joplin, who disappeared late Friday evening when a boat capsized on Center Creek just north of Joplin.

Brad Baker of Joplin, the diver, said he found the body pinned under a stump in about six feet of water and about 150 yards downstream from where Stubblefield and two sons-in-law were dumped into the creek.

They started a float trip from Carterville, Mo., and were about three miles east of Missouri 43 when the boat hit a branch protruding from the creek and turned over. The other two men got ashore safely.

Emergency crews searched for Stubblefield until after dark Friday night, using searchlights, but the current was too strong for divers to operate safely.

Baby lift continues

By The Associated Press

As the flights left Tan Son Nhut airport, investigators sifted the wreckage and hunted bodies in the rice paddy where a U.S. Air Force C5A Galaxy cargo plane crashed Friday with 243 orphans aboard. More than 200 lives were lost, making it the second worst air tragedy in history.

Forty of the youngsters leaving Saturday were survivors of the Galaxy crash.

In America, hundreds of anxious adoptive parents awaited word on whether the Vietnamese orphans they had adopted survived the crash.

Actor Yul Brynner, in Boston for a pre-Broadway tryout of a new musical, and his wife Jacqueline were among them.

"We're keeping our fingers crossed," said Mrs. Brynner. "We are are looking for help — not only for ourselves, but for everybody. Only God can help us all."

The first plane to leave Saturday carried 31 orphans headed for San Francisco and a welcome by President Ford.

The largest of the flights, which included two chartered jumbo jets and two C141 military cargo planes, carried 409 children.

Another 263 orphans were flown to Australia and Canada.

Tears flowed freely at the big airport near Saigon as Vietnamese foster mothers who had cared for the America-bound orphans saw them off for the flights.

The Agency for International Development in Washington, the government office directing the $2-million airlift, said it had been inundated with calls and is now telling callers that there are no more children available for adoption.

"The public response has been so overwhelming that there is no longer a need for adoption," Weston Emery, supervisor of AID's telephone referral office, said Saturday.

"The several adoption agencies that are working in the program already have long waiting lists and are not servicing calls themselves."

Some 2,000 orphans are scheduled to be brought to the United States, but they already have families waiting for them.

Question
Our son was attending his fourth year of college on a student loan when he passed away. Are my wife and I responsible for the repayment of this indebtedness?
Answer
It is very possible you may be responsible. If your son was under legal age when he first secured this loan and you co-signed it with him as a personal obligation you are involved. More probably he borrowed the money from a federally insured state or private agency. If this should be the case 100% of the unpaid balance of the principal will be paid, but not the interest.
It is almost certain the lending agency carries credit life insurance, if your son borrowed from his bank, credit union or savings and loan company, and the amount is not federally insured. In this situation the unpaid balance of the note will be paid. In any of these situations you will need a certified copy of the death certificate which we can get for you.

Drug education may have flaws

NEW HAVEN (AP) — Drug education taught early in junior high school appears to encourage the use of marijuana and alcohol among those pupils, according to a major federally sponsored study.

But the study of 13,500 students in the New Haven area also indicates such courses, when taught to older pupils, tend to discourage the use of drugs somewhat.

The $750,000 project, directed by three Yale University researchers and supported by National Institute of Mental Health and the National Institute of Drug Abuse grants, compared drug use among pupils in various school levels from the 7th grade to the 12th grade.

The survey results were based on student responses to questions about their use of drugs, including alcohol.

It showed that 3 per cent of the random sample of 7th graders without various types of drug education in school were currently smoking marijuana during the 1970-71 school year. Two years later, at the 11th grade level, the percentage had risen to 20.

Among students in the same age group taking regular drug courses, the size of the group rose from 2 to 32 per cent during the three-year period.

However, among 9th grade students with no drug course, the percentage of drinkers rose from 6 to 36 per cent during the three years while the percentage of those with regular drug courses rose only from 8 to 27 per cent, according to the study.

The researchers said the results do not support general speculation from some quarters that drug education actually encourages drug use in all age groups.

"Only in the case of younger children do our findings support this notion," the report said.

"For children older than the 7th grade cohort, the results of our study indicate that drug education may be somewhat useful."

The study showed "strikingly similar" experience between the effect of drug education on alcohol and marijuana use, according to Rosalie M. Berberian, assistant professor of psychiatry and director of Yale's center of Survey Research.

The finding did not indicate a significant effect of drug education on the use of heroin, cocaine and other "harder" drugs, she said.

The researchers also examined drug-use patterns appearing in their interviews with 4,500 students during each year of the survey.

It showed alcohol, as expected, was by far the most popular drug and the one with the greatest increase in use.

Drunken driving conviction for star

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Actress-swimmer Esther Williams has been found guilty of drunken driving. The 51-year-old film star was fined $315 and was placed on two years' probation by Municipal Court Judge Albert Blanford.

Miss Williams was driving and her husband, actor Fernando Lamas, was a passenger in a car that was stopped by the California Highway Patrol on Christmas night.

Political fund could cause problems

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Discovery of an alleged corporate political fund of the Missouri Public Service Co. of Kansas City could cause the utility to lose its operating franchise, state officials say.

The Missouri Public Service Commission revealed the fund Friday in its audit of the utility, which is requesting an $11.3 million rate hike.

A company spokesman said the contributions were "personal money" and were made voluntarily.

The company serves 130,000 gas and electric customers in suburbs of Kansas City and other parts of western Missouri.

The audit found that 45 company supervisors contributed 1 per cent of their monthly salaries to a political club known as the Western Missouri Good Government Club.

The supervisors received a 1 per cent "merit raise" when they joined the club, Leland Curtis, PSC chief counsel, said. The 1 per cent raise was deducted from each supervisor's paycheck and forwarded to the club as dues, he said.

He called the raises "monetary recognition."

"It has long been a policy to give monetary recognition for participation in community affairs and in carrying out their citizenship responsibility," Stephens said.

He said the employes formed the club after being urged by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce "to support good candidates for political office."

The chamber gave utility employes a course in how to set up the club, he said. "No employe was pressured into participating or contributing," he added.

Leland Curtis, PSC chief counsel, said, "Potentially, there is an ouster suit whereby the company could lost its charter." He said the suits could involve criminal misdemeanor as well as civil suit charges.

Curtis said staff found $9,700 that employes contributed to the club in 1974.

The commission's findings have been turned over to Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth for further investigation.

Danforth has called for a joint investigation of the fund by the U.S. district attorney in Kansas City, the prosecuting attorney of Jackson County and the Missouri Elections Commission.

Under state law, the attorney general can call for a corporation to lose its charter if corporate money is used for political purposes.

Curtis said the PSC staff had "a damn good case" that corporate money was used. He said the fact that raises came at the same time the club dues were deducted from paychecks "clearly indicates it was really corporate money."

Curtis also said the company refused to say who headed the club and how much money it had.

Stephens said, "There wasn't anything denied the commission staff" while they were conducting the audit.

The fund discovery comes on the heels of reports of similar political activities by other utilities and businesses.

Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. has come under fire in past months for allegedly forcing top executives to contribute to a political fund.

Earlier this week, officials of the Mercantile Trust Co. in St. Louis acknowledged the existence of a political fund contributed by their employes. But they denied charges that those contributions were not voluntary.

Missouri Public Service Co. is seeking a 19 per cent raise in electric rates and a 9 per cent hike in gas charges.

Curtis said the commission staff didn't allow the 1 per cent merit raise as part of the rate hike. "The ratepayer should not be forced to cover this expense in the rates he pays," a PSC statement said.

But the amount disallowed would only be "a drop in the bucket" of the rate hike the utility is requesting, Curtis said.

Stephens said the club has been in existence since 1969.

THREE EASY WAYS TO 'CHARGE-IT'

Law library's funding to be continued by county

By ED VAUGHAN
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

The Pettis County Court is continuing to partially support the county law library with general revenue funds despite a recommendation by the state auditor's office to discontinue the practice.

During its last audit of the county, for three years ended Dec. 31, 1973, the auditor's report recommended in June, 1974, the County Court discontinue partial support of the law library from general revenue because the practice lacks proper statutory authority.

Section 514.470 of the 1969 Missouri Revised Statutes "provides that law libraries are to be financed by fees from civil cases filed in the Circuit Court."

"There is not specific grant of power to the County Court to allow them to fund a law library for the use of members of the county bar," the auditor's report stated.

That section also grants circuit court judges in second, third or fourth class counties the authority to require attorneys filing civil suits to deposit with the circuit clerk a fee not to exceed $3 ($5 in a second class county).

Section 514.480 states that such fees collected by the circuit clerk shall be turned over to the circuit judge or someone appointed by the judge as treasurer of a law library fund. Disbursements from the fund are to be made on the order of the judge for the maintenance and upkeep of the law library used by the county bar association. The library is for the use of officers of all courts of record in the county and all attorneys licensed to practice law in the county.

Partial funding of the library has been questioned because a similar auditor's recommendation to disband the Pettis County Fire Department was followed by the County Court.

In its report, the state auditor's office said the court did not have the authority to fund a county fire protection service from general revenue funds.

Members of the Pettis County Fire Department therefore walked off the job Jan. 2, after learning their paychecks would no longer be endorsed by County Auditor Jerry Barr and County Clerk Mrs. Mary Jane Wilson.

The county fire protection service then, "technically" was operated illegally for 19 years through general revenue funds.

However, Judge Bluhm, Mrs. Wilson and Barr said partial funding of the county law library from the general revenue fund is in the best interest of the county, despite the auditor's recommendation, because of the economics involved. All three signed the March 19 warrant (check) transferring 1975-budgeted funds to be the law library account.

The law library, located on the north side of the third floor in the courthouse, contains the only complete set of law books in the county that both Circuit Judge Frank Meyer and Prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming have available for reference, it was learned. Both Judge Meyer and Fleming have very limited law references in their own offices.

Burns told The Democrat-Capital that the attorney general's office has never issued an opinion or ruling on the funding of county law libraries. However, he said in this case the funding would probably fall under Judge Meyer's authority to order anything necessary to perform his judicial duties.

Section 50.640 of 1969 Missouri Revised Statutes states that circuit judges and clerks must approve any changes made in their budget estimates by the county budget officer, who must appropriate the amounts estimated.

Judge Meyer refused to comment on the issue.

The county's law library expenditures from general revenue funds are placed in Judge Meyer's budget each year to complement the civil fees collected.

During Judge Meyer's term of office, $3 has been collected for each civil case filed with the circuit clerk to help support the law library through Dec. 31, 1974. That fee was raised to $5 when Pettis County gained its second-class status Jan. 1.

Total disbursements from the library fund were $4,111.06 in 1972; $4,171.50 in 1973; and $3,927.90 in 1974, for a total of $12,210.52.

Of that figure, $6,000, or slightly under half of the total expenditure, originated out of general revenue funds budgeted to Judge Meyer's office — $1,000 in 1972; $3,000 in 1973 and $2,000 in 1974.

Mrs. Wilson, appointed treasurer of the law library fund by Judge Meyer, said that $3,000 was budgeted to the law library fund in 1974, but only $2,000 was actually spent. Judge Meyer's budget for 1975 included $2,000 for the library.

It was explained by the various county officials contacted that this method of funding the law library was in the best interest of county taxpayers because it is less expensive to keep one complete set of updated books than to keep separate ones for use by Judge Meyer, Fleming and other county officials.

Mrs. Wilson said that Judge Meyer assured her that partial funding of the law library from general revenue funds is legal and she signed the March 19 warrant for the 1975 transfer of funds to the law library account for that reason.

Composer sees work come to life

By RON JENNINGS
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

As a promising young pianist, Florence Julia Morseman, 2101 South Kentucky, won scholarships to the Curtis Institute of Philadelphia and Kansas City Horner Conservatory of Music, made several concert tours and traveled the midwest two summers with a circuit-riding Chatauqua troupe.

But her most memorable musical moment of all, she says, will come at 3 p.m. Sunday — years after she left the professional entertainment world to work as a deputy in the U.S. Custom's offices in St. Louis and Kansas City.

At a private recital in her home, 13 original works she has composed over the years will be sung by Mrs. Donald Barnes, Mrs. Stanley Fisher and Mrs. Bill McLaughlin Jr.

Many of the melodies, Miss Morseman said, "were floating around in my head for years." But, she explained, it wasn't until she retired and moved back to her native Sedalia that she had time to put her music on paper.

"That's a very time-consuming process," she explained. "It's sometimes easy to think up a melody in your head. But, having to sit down and copy it out note for note, well, that's something else again."

Although the melodies are entirely her own, Miss Morseman's sources of "just the right lyrics" for particular songs range from biblical scripture, the words of Christian Science founder Mary Baker Eddy to the verses of her friend Hazel Lang.

"That is just as much a challenge as writing the melody," she said. "It is important that the lyrics 'fit' the melody, if you know what I mean."

Among the numbers to be presented in her home Sunday afternoon will be "Out of the Depth" with lyrics from the 130th Psalm, "Low White Star" with words by Jeanne Beatty and "My Auntie's Quilt" with words by Miss Lang.

She has never attempted to have any of her works published, Mrs. Morseman said, "because the royalties aren't really that much." Indeed, Mrs. Morseman indicated, it was only at Mrs. Barnes' insistence that the recital was ever scheduled.

"I've been happy just to compose for own pleasure and those of my friends," she said. "But when Mrs. Barnes examined my compositions several months ago, she became very interested. If course, having Mrs. Barnes and the other wonderful women sing them makes them that much better. She (Mrs. Barnes) interprets them so well."

Wallace's son says he will wed Aug. 16

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — George C. Wallace Jr., 23-year-old son of the governor of Alabama, and Janice Culbertson, a 22-year-old Montgomery artist, will be married on Aug. 16.

Reward systems

By ERMA BOMBECK

The awards system has gotten out of hand in this country. (Excuse me, I get a cookie when I get the lead to my story down.)

There're the Oscars, the Emmys, the Tonys, and the Grammys, not to mention statues of gold for the best commercial, funniest person, entertainer of the year, best dressed, worst dressed, Miss America and her comical sidekick, Miss Congeniality, Mother of the Year, the all-stars of everything and the best use of Pillsbury.

It would be hard to find one person in this world who isn't walking around with an acceptance speech in his pocket with the exception of children.

It's strange. We all start out raising children with the reward system. We reward them for burping, eating, sleeping, knowing which one in the room is Da Da, and the growing and losing of teeth.

The ultimate in rewards continues through toilet training. I was a guest in a home one evening where the hostess was summoned by her toddler to the bathroom to catch her performance.

The mother emerged and said to me, "She wants you to see what she has done." Reluctantly, I peeked into the bowl, gave her a V for Victory sign and returned to my seat where the hostess said, "Well?"

"It far exceeded my expectations," I said.

"But what did you give her?"

I returned to the bathroom and gave her a standing ovation.

Then suddenly, the praise and rewards end. Personally, I have seen an awful lot of originality among children that should not go unrewarded. Why not a night to honor children who are outstanding in the following categories?

FOR THE MOST ORIGINAL STORY by a teen-ager of why the keys are locked in the car in the cemetery with the lights on.

FOR THE MOST LOGICAL EXPLANATION of why it takes three boys to carry a note to Miss Lewis in the girls' gym.

FOR THE MOST CONVINCING PERFORMANCE by a son that wearing boots to school will destroy a human life.

MOST OUTSTANDING SPECIAL EFFECTS AWARD to a boy's bedroom that makes your eyes smart.

MOST AMUSING MONOLOGUE by a daughter claiming, "I got to be me" when she is wearing your entire wardrobe.

Excuse me. I get another cookie when this space is filled.

Legislative committee is target

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth filed suit in the Missouri Supreme Court Friday charging that a powerful legislative commiteee has usurped its powers by altering the appropriations process.

He said the Committee on Fiscal Affairs has stepped out of its bounds by advising state department heads to come to it rather than the full legislature for requests to transfer appropriated funds.

"This language could not be more clear that appropriated funds can only be expended for the purposes stated in appropriations bills," the suit contended.

Through its orders the Fiscal Affairs Committee, formed of members of both chambers, has "unlawfully assumed and usurped franchises, powers and privileges it does not lawfully have."

The appropriations bills approved last session said, "The purpose of this appropriation shall not be altered without the prior approval of the Fiscal Affairs Committee and the concurrence of the commissioners of administration.

Robert James, former commissioner of administration who resigned from the post after failing to receive Senate confirmation, was reluctant to use the committee fund transfer system and drew criticism from Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage.

Film star facing conspiracy charge

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — Thomas Noel Rettig, star of the "Lassie" television series in the 1950s, has been ordered held in lieu of $5,000 bond after arraignment on a charge of conspiring to import cocaine.

U.S. Commissioner Richard Wood set a preliminary hearing Friday for April 18 in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles.

Rettig, 33, was accused of hiding cocaine in a Peruvian liquor bottle, according to Drug Enforcement Administration agents.

Newlywed gets clawed by husband's toenails

Dear Ann Landers: I am a newlywed who is too embarrassed to discuss my problem with anyone who knows me. I hope you will reply and not mention the town I live in.

Problem: My husband's toenails are so long and sharp that I spend hours darning his new socks. He wears them only twice or three times and the toenails cut right through.

At night he scratches my legs to pieces. I used to wear pantyhose to bed but he ruined so many pairs by snagging them that I quit. Will you please tell me how to get my guy to trim his darned toenails? He says they don't bother HIM and that I should get off his back. — Clawed In Tennessee

Dear Clawed: You can catch more flies with honey than with vinegar, dear. But a little pedicure set and offer to take care of your husband's toenails personally. He will find the sudsy water, foot massage and gentle clipping irresistible. Goodbye bleeding ankles and torn socks!

Dear Ann Landers: My grandchildren range from 3 to 8 years of age. This last holiday was such a hassle I'm still not over it. I bought the three children the same gift with slight differences, such as color and size. They fought the whole day because all three wanted the same gift.

I told my daughter-in-law her children should be taught that a gift is a gift and they should be grateful for whatever they receive. She informed me in blunt terms, and I quote, "If you can't select a different gift for each child, based on age, sex and personality, then please give them all the same thing and prevent a lot of fighting."

Please help us ignorant, misguided grandparents everywhere. Tell us if gifts presented on the same day should be similar, different or identical? — Bewildered In Memphis

Dear Bea: Generally speaking, the age, sex and interest of each child should be considered when selecting a gift. Your grandchildren, however, seem extremely competitive — so, unless you can get some clue from their mom as to what each might like, it would be safer to buy them all the same gift and keep the blood off the rugs.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you must be sick to death by this time of the all-boy all-girl family mail, but I do hope you will find room for just one more.

My husband and I had three beautiful daughters. They are almost grown up now, but I remember so well a certain next-door neighbor who used to yell over the fence — "Hey, when are you going to have a boy?" (She was disgustingly smug about having had two of each.)

After a third time I shouted back, "When the girls grow up and get married we'll have the pleasure of three fine sons and someone else will have had the job of raising them. Sons always go over to the wife's family, you know."

That was the last time I heard a peep out of her. I hope you will print this letter so "Mother Of A Harem" will see it. Everyone needs a comeback with a sting in it now and then. This could be hers. — Wouldn't Trade 'em For The World

Dear Wouldn't Trade: Thanks for a lovely what-for. This should net you a new friend.

CONFIDENTIAL to Disappointed In Her And Feeling Betrayed: Why did you expect her to respect the confidence? You didn't when you passed on that choice bit of gossip. Let this be a lesson to you. Keep your lip zipped and you won't have to worry about being "betrayed."

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

Common sense needed

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The American transportation industry "mainly requires the measured application of common sense," Lt. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis Jr., ret., assistant secretary of transportation for environment, safety and consumer affairs, says.

Common sense is needed more "than a massive dose of new and expensive technology, he told members of the American Council of Consumer Interests Friday.

The highway system is one area that has been built to a capacity far beyond its use, he said.

"We believe that better traffic management and improvements to public transportation are more of a solution than simply pouring concrete and building more highways."

Railroads were termed "the sick man of the transportation industry," by Davis. He said they suffered from over-regulation, lack of funds and inefficient management.

"We must permit more pricing flexibility so they can compete more effectively," he said.

Air carriers are better off financially than railroads, but they also should receive a heavy dose of deregulation, Davis said.

"We seek to remove the federal government's control over determining the price of airline tickets, and designating which company may enter the airline business and what routes they must fly.

"The airline industry is now mature and it requires much greater flexibility as an economic source," he said.

To seek extension of 1976 benefit program

By The Associated Press

President Ford says he will ask Congress to extend until the end of 1976 a supplemental benefits program that entitles most workers to as much as 65 weeks of unemployment compensation.

Ford, on a working vacation in California, told a meeting of the San Francisco Bay Area Council Friday night that his request for an 18-month extention of the program would be sent to Capitol Hill next week. Without congressional action, the program would expire June 30.

Although he made no direct mention of government statistics issued earlier in the day showing that nationwide unemployment climbed to 8.7 per cent, Ford emphasized jobless benefits in his speech.

He said he also was recommending improvements in aid to the 12 million persons in the workforce not regularly covered by unemployment insurance. He proposed to extend the present one-year temporary program for such persons to the end of 1976 and extend the benefit period from 26 to 39 weeks.

The President added that "in the expectation that the economy will show improvement before the year is out, I am going to ask that these extended programs have a built-in procedure to reduce or terminate the program when the unemployment rate decreases to a specified level." He did not say what that level might be.

"The procedures will concentrate the limited resources in those areas experiencing the greatest unemployment," he said.

The March unemployment percentage translated into 8 million persons who are jobless and looking for work. It marked an increase of one-half percentage point, or 500,000 persons from the February figure of 8.2 per cent.

The March rate was the highest in the computation.

Meany referred to the 3.9 million workers forced to work part-time because full-time jobs are not available and to other persons who have given up looking for jobs and thus are not considered by government statisticians to be members of the potential workforce.

The number of so-called "diss auto industry brightened a bit Friday, as manufacturers announ be on layoff next week, the lowest number since the week of March 10. A total of 237,155 workers were on furlough this week.

Plastic bags can be put through the washing machine, then hung up to try. You may have to turn them inside out to dry completely.

My Sincere Thanks

and appreciation to all of those who supported me for City Councilman.

"We seek to remove the federal government's control over determining the price of airline tickets, and designating which company may enter the airline business and what routes they must fly.

"The airline industry is now mature and it requires much greater flexibility as an economic source," he said.

The Phoenix Nest

Edited by Martin Levin

By BARBARA EVERETT

Shed a tear for the male honeybee. He's been the lowliest nonentity for so many centuries that he's barely tolerated in bee society.

Outnumbered by females 10,000 to 1, he has to watch idly while they run the shop. All day, morning to night, the females buzz busily from hive to flower and from flower to hive, bringing in nectar and pollen. They make the wax combs, process the honey, take care of the kids in the communal nursery, and keep a spotless house.

If their hollow tree or wooden hive develops splinters, they haul in resin to varnish it smooth again. When the weather is hot, they stand near the door and fan, forcing air through the hive, and when it's very hot they spread water over the combs to keep them cool.

It's a pure case of discrimination. Equal honey for equal work? Hah! The drone swallows his pride along with the honey the maidens feed him, because he can't work at all. They didn't issue him any wax-making or nectar-gathering equipment. He can't even sting anybody.

This second-class nothing has only one value in life. He is, alas, a sex object. When the old queen begins to falter in her egg laying, the practical citizens dethrone her and crown another one. The new young ruler waltzes up into a colonization flight, giving the drone the old come-hither. Overcome by passion and hope, he follows. For one mad moment he thinks he's liberated.

Then the honeymoon ends. The bride deserts the groom and starts laying eggs. No matter to her that he believed all those sweet buzzings. No matter to her that he dreamed of a cozy hideaway for two and planned paretnhood makes three. She's through with him. Forever.

When their children come toddling into the world — at the rate of from one to three thousand a day — he's underwing, so out he goes. The queen will keep delivering every day for the rest of her five-year life, but she won't need him for that again. Once was enough. Three million babies from one joyful interlude? He doesn't know whether to crow or cry.

Banished from the hive, he sits on a sunny leaf and meditates. That chauvinist used him. To the females go the meaningful lives. They are the ones who stagger home loaded with nectar, who turn it into honey, who feed the children, carry out the garbage, build the combs, patch the hive, fight off intruders. All he can do is sit — irrelevant, non-contributing, a sometime plaything.

Farm tire, battery sales concern local farm bureau

The Pettis County Farm Bureau Friday night decided to "drum up business" for its ailing farm tire and battery sales program by contacting prospective dealers in the county.

Farm Bureau director Jerry Conaway told about 14 members present, "I'm thoroughly disgusted with the program as it is now. But we won't get anywhere unless we get a dealer to service and mount tires."

The Farm Bureau tire and battery program is a service to bureau members whereby farm machinery tires and batteries can be purchased through the bureau at a considerable savings. Safemark brand tires, however, are the only brand sold through the bureau.

According to Conaway, Pettis County dealers do not service and mount tires. This, he says, has hindered sales.

In other action, the bureau considered initiating a petition against increased property taxes, but took no action.

Discussing a change in Missouri Statutes, Section 137.073, Conaway pointed out all rural assessed property evaluation has been increased from 30 to 33 and one-third per cent with the statute change.

The increase, which produces an 11 per cent increase in property taxes, qualifies for a tax levy reduction. Action only would be taken should the possibility of the reduction be overlooked, Conaway said. He therefore, suggested Farm Bureau members confer with County Assessor Bill McCune before initiating a petition. "We have to know what we're talking about before we do anything," Conaway said.

The bureau also decided to hold their annual barbecue at 6 p.m. July 8 at the State Fairgrounds.

Baseball is still America's national pastime

By GEORGE GRELLA
University of Rochester
For The Associated Press

Americans this week have some reason for rejoicing: The Republic has survived another winter and Opening Day is at hand.

That recurrent national disgrace, the Super Bowl, has become history. Hockey's blood-smeared glaze of ice, once threatening to coat the land, will soon melt like a bad memory.

Even basketball eventually will dribble down in its endless playoffs. All those games of winter provided their small portion of sustenance during the long period of blight and chill from the end of the World Series to the beginning of the baseball season.

No matter what the calendar says, no matter what the weather, spring is here because baseball is about to start again.

Whatever the proponents of professional football may claim, baseball is still the national pastime, the most American of our sports.

Expressing some of the best aspects of our national character, the game occupies a place beside our most important and honored institutions. It celebrates the liberty and the individuality that our Founding Fathers thought essential to the development of the nation; it is the sport of the free and the brave.

In a country where church and state are separated by constitutional decree, the game of baseball provides the nearest thing to a national religion.

Baseball shares its origins with all ball games, in the ritual games of Egypt's springtime festivals, which were played both to insure the death of winter and celebrate the coming of spring.

In our culture, baseball remains a rite of spring; it begins in April and ends in October, stretching its long season from the seed time to the harvest, guaranteeing the fertility of the land, sufficient water (hence rainouts in the early season), a warm summer and a bountiful harvest.

The game is therefore a magical activity, a tribute to our finest seasons, a life-enhancing ritual of renewal.

In cultures all over the world, the process of welcoming spring is under way. A holy or exalted personage may give a speech, say a prayer, bless his people.

In America, some community leader will throw out the first ball.

Then we know, no matter how cold our climate, even in major league parks as far north as Minnesota or Montreal, that spring will surely come, that the forces of death and darkness will be held at bay once more until the World Series ends and winter and football descend simultaneously on the land again.

Though it can be traced from the depths of the prehistoric past through innumerable European variations, baseball seems especially American in its history and traditions.

Washington's soldiers played a rudimentary version of the game at Valley Forge, long before Adolph Hitler thought up the blitz or Vince Lombardi devised the power sweep.

The discredited story of Abner Doubleday's invention of the sport caused the Hall of Fame to be located in Cooperstown, N.Y., where James Fenimore Cooper's heroic frontiersman, Natty Bumppo, one of our most important literary figures, still roams the outfield.

The first more or less recognizable game, between Alexander Cartwright's Knickerbockers and the New York Club, was played on the Elysian Fields of Hoboken, N.J., in 1846. Thirty years later, in the nation's centennial year, the first professional major league, the National Association, was formed.

The spectacle of baseball that opening day inaugurates is one of the most beautiful and significant that our country can present—a dream image of our past, our possibilities, our sense of self.

Unlike any other team game played with a ball, baseball does not submit to a clock or an enclosure. It defies the limitations of time and space. Unlike football or basketball, the game is not played against time but toward victory by one team or another, which may take any conceivable amount of time.

The players can, in a sense, dwell in a world unlike any other, governed by no clock—the timeless world of eternal youth which our literature always has suggested as the land of heart's desire, the Great Good Place.

Beyond its ritual, its magic, its history, its inspirational possiblities, baseball reminds us of the American past and its continued existence in the present, giving us hope for the nation and its people.

If it is a life-enhancing game, it also is a game of youth, of innocence. Some teams still wear white uniforms, affirming the tradition of innocence in their boys' caps and old-fashioned knickers, recalling the days when the sport was played on thousands of village greens throughout the young nation.

Cards vs. Expos

Gibson to hurl opener

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Aging Bob Gibson takes the mound Monday night for the St. Louis Cardinals against Dave McNally and a recycled Montreal Expos club which could be a National League surprise.

Manager Red Schoendienst conceded, "For us to do anything, we have to have good pitching and be able to play well behind it."

"Gibson's been throwing well, and he pitched more innings in spring training than he did last year," Schoendienst noted hopefully.

"The big thing with him is his knee's been stronger," the Cards manager added in reference to the 2.81 earned run average Gibson compiled in 32 innnngs.

That leaves switch-hitters Reggie Smith and Ted Simmons in the Nos. 4-5 berths followed by the left-handed hitting Hernandez and right-handed hitters Ken Reitz and Brinkman.

"We put McBride higher in the order to get more speed and stay away from the double play," Schoendienst said. "If he and Brock get on base, we'll be tough."

A Bush Stadium crowd of 25,000 is expected to watch the opener. Gibson, whose career mark is 11-7 against the Expos, was 0-2 against them in 1974.

NBA playoffs open Tuesday, but pairings still in doubt

By The Associated Press

The National Basketball Association playoffs will begin Tuesday night — that's for sure.

But who will be playing whom, and where, is another matter entirely.

Ten of the league's 18 teams qualify for post-season play. Nine of the playoff berths have been clinched, with only the wild-card spot in the Eastern Conference still undecided.

If the Cleveland Cavaliers beat Kansas City-Omaha in Kansas City Sunday, the Cavaliers will make the playoffs for the first time in the club's history. If Cleveland loses and the New York Knicks beat the Buffalo Braves at New York, then both would finish the regular season with 40-42 records, and the Knicks would make the playoffs because they have won their season series with the Cavs.

Either Cleveland or New York would play Houston in a first round best-of-three series. A Houston-New York series would open in Houston, since the Rockets have the better record.

But a Houston-Cleveland series could open in either city, depending on whether Cleveland wins its game Sunday. That would give the Cavs a 41-41 record, same as Houston, and Cleveland would have the edge because it has a better record against conference opponents.

The team with the best record in each conference draws a bye. The Boston Celtics could clinch that distinction in the East by beating Philadelphia Saturday night. That would mean Washington would meet Buffalo in a best-of-seven series, while Boston awaits the winners of Houston's series against Cleveland or New York.

A Boston loss would give Washington a chance to gain the No. 1 spot by winning its final two games.

In the Western Conference, Golden State has clinched the bye with the best percentage. The most likely pairings are Detroit against Seattle in the best-of-three qualifier, and Kansas City-Omaha against Chicago in the best-of-seven series.

However, Seattle had a chance to catch KC-Omaha for the third-best record in the Conference. In which case Seattle would play Chicago and KC-Omaha would take on Detroit in the two-of-three set, the winner of which would play Golden State.

An NBA spokesman said most playoff series would open Tuesday night, although because of problems in availability of arenas some might not open until Wednesday or Thursday.

The NBA's regular-season ends Sunday.

L'Escargot pulls away

Only 10 of the 31 starters managed to navigate the fabled Aintree course with their jockeys in the saddles. Two horses were killed in the 4½-mile race which includes 30 fences. Numerous other horses unseated their riders and then continued to run, turning the race into an obstacle course for those jockeys still in contention.

The victory fulfilled a long-standing ambition for L'Escargot's owner, Raymond Guest of New York.

"I've been trying to win the National for more than 20 years," said Guest, who received the winner's prize of $91,202. "Now I'm the happiest man in the world.

The 12-year-old L'Escargot, a 13-2 betting choice, crossed the final fence alongside the 7-2 favorite, Red Rum, winner of this race the past two years. But in the long stretch run, L'Escargot pulled away.

Openers postponed

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Tigers have postponed their American League baseball opener against Baltimore for two days from next Tuesday to Thursday because the snowbound Tiger Stadium field would not be playable.

Meanwhile, over in Chicago, a Cubs spokesman said Saturday that the Pittsburgh Pirates-Cubs National League opener has been moved from Tuesday to Wednesday afternoon.

Just too wet

The Smith-Cotton Tigers junior varsity baseball game scheduled at Green Ridge Friday afternoon was postponed due to wet grounds.

No rescheduled date was announced.

Wildcats sweep a pair from baseball Tigers

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State, with Dave Specht totaling seven runs batted in, swept a baseball doubleheader from the University of Missouri Saturday, 14-8 and 8-6.

Kansas State was leading, 6-5 in their half of the sixth inning when the Wildcats erupted for eight runs. The big blows were back-to-back two-run doubles by Specht and Jim McCormick. Andy Replogle went the distance in the first game for Kansas State. The loser was John Piechocinski.

The Wildcats jumped to a commanding lead in the first inning of the second game when Specht clubbed a grand slam home run with two out. Craig Cooper then followed with a solo homer. All six of Missouri's runs in the second game were unearned as Kansas State committed five errors.

Kansas State is now 10-11 for the year and 2-1 in Big Eight Conference action. Missouri is 8-10, 1-2.

Black Hawks sing blues after Berenson's goal

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Red Berenson's power play goal with 3:35 left lifted the St. Louis Blues to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks in the National Hockey League Saturday night.

Berenson took a drop pass from Chuck Lefley and fired from just inside the blue line to beat Chicago netminder Tony Esposito with a waist-high blast while the Black Hawks' Dick Redmond was serving a penalty.

Previously Garry Unger scored his 34th and 35th goals of the season for the Blues, putting his team in front during the first period and producing a 2-2 tie a period later.

Chicago responded to Unger's first goal with quick tallies by John Marks and Stan Mikita in the second period, with Mikita scoring on a power play.

Wayne Merrick afterward snapped a 2-2 tie with a shot which eluded Esposito and hit a goalpost before going into the Chicago net at 3:48 of the final period, but the Black Hawks' Darcy Rota's power play goal 2½ minutes later produced a 3-3 tie.

Chicago closes its regular NHL season Sunday afternoon at home against the Minnesota North Stars and St. Louis winds up its campaign Saturday night in Kansas City against the Scouts.

Haskell deals SFCC doubleheader setback

State Fair Community College's Greater Kansas City Community College Conference baseball record dipped to 0-4 Friday as the Roadrunners lost both ends of a doubleheader in Liberty Park Stadium to Haskell, Kan., Indian Junior College.

The Roadrunners, who lost an opening-season twinbill to Johnson County, Kan., Community College, got good pitching from Bob Whissel and Greg Gooch, but couldn't overcome their errors.

"We didn't hit and we made too many errors," said State Fair head coach Foster McGuire. "We've had pretty good pitching in the games we've played, but we can't win them with the mistakes we've been making. Our hitting's got to get more consistent," he added.

Whisssel, who gave up four of his six hits in the first inning of the opener, was charged with the 5-1 loss. Gooch tossed a five-hitter in the second game, but State Fair couldn't get any offense mustered and lost, 8-0.

The Indians' pitching duo of Jerry Troutman and Bill Autobee held the Roadrunners to a total of only eight hits in the afternoon action.

State Fair has a doubleheader scheduled this afternoon at 1 p.m. in Liberty Park Stadium against GK4C opponent Longview of Lee's Summit.

NFL Players Association has new list of demands

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League Players Association announced Saturday that it wants a new contract with NFL owners to guarantee $25,000 minimum pay for veterans, a veteran's right to refuse a trade and the appointment of an arbitrator for grievances.

The demands resemble those which led to a 42-day strike in 1974. But the association omitted a call for the elimination of the so-called Rozelle compensation rule.

The rule states that if two teams cannot reach agreement when a player switches clubs after his option year, the commissioner can select compensation for the team losing him.

Whichever club signs the player generally must give up a player or draft choices to the other club. The players claim this controversial provision inhibits free trade.

Ed Garvey, the union executive director, said in a statement that the Rozelle Rule, named after NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle, would not be part of the bargaining because it is being challenged in the courts.

The owners have claimed that the Rozelle Rule must be part of the collective bargaining.

In its proposals, the union cited what it called "a yellow caution light" arising in U.S. Court decisions involving football player Joe Kapp and basketball's Oscar Robertson.

The caution light, the union said, tells both the NFL Management Council, bargaining agent for the owners, and the NFL Players Association "that whatever our individual views of the NFL system, we must operate within the public policy established by Congress and interpreted by the courts."

The players demand the following among others:

—During an option year on his contract a player with less than five years experience should be paid 110 per cent of his previous year's salary. Players with more than five years experience should have no pay limits. Under current rules, a player is paid 90 per cent of his salary during his option year.

—When a player is placed on waivers, he should have the right to declare immediately that he wishes his contract to be canceled and to negotiate with any club he chooses.

—Players with five years experience or more should have the right to cancel trades.

—An impartial arbitrator should be appointed to help settle disputes. The arbitrator on all but injury disputes is now the commissioner.

—Minimum salaries should be $20,000 for rookies and $25,000 for veterans. Current minimums are $12,000 for rookies and $13,000 for veterans.

—Players should receive the greater of $4,000 or a game check for post season divisional playoffs; $11,500 for the winners and the losers of a conference championship and $20,000 for the winner and $10,500 for the loser of the Super Bowl.

—Each player with more than five years experience should be paid $5,000 for each year in the league upon retirement or when he leaves the sport.

4-stroke advantage

Weiskopf retains Greensboro lead

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Tom Weiskopf struggled through testing, tricky winds to a 72 but still retained a solid four-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $225,000 Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament.

Weiskopf, the only leader this event has had, went to an over-par round for the first time in the tournament, but none of the field could make a major challenge in the shifting winds that gusted to more than 30 miles an hour.

Weiskopf had four bogeys in his one-over-par effort, but his 54-hole total of 207 left him six-under on the 6,643-yard Sedgefield Country Club course.

And Weiskopf, who hasn't won since his banner season of 1973, remained in firm control.

Ken Still, a bubbly 40-year-old veteran, moved into second with a 69 but remained well back at 211.

Johnny Miller, a three-time winner and the sensation of the tour this year, who admittedly is using this event as a warmup for next week's Masters, came on with a hard-won one-under-par 70 and took a share of third place at 212.

Geiberger's 66 was the best round of the day that remained much as the first two rounds—cold and windy. McGee had a 68, Hill 72.

"I still have an outside chance to win," Miller said. "I'm just gonna try to do a good job and see what happens. I'd be very happy to finish second, third or fourth and go to Augusta in the right frame of mind."

Lee Trevino had a 72 and was one more stroke behind at 213. Arnold Palmer and Gary Player were out of it. Palmer shot 77-222 and the little South African blew to 77-223.

Weiskopf, as everyone else, had trouble on the glass-slick greens that he called "the fastest I can remember on the tour."

He three-putted three times, once for par.

Miller three-putted three times in his first seven holes.

But neither was as disturbed as the stormy Hill who challenged Weiskopf most of the day.

On the 17th hole, his approach shot lipped out of the cup for what would have an eagle two. The ball skidded some 10 feet past and his soft tap missed—and went six feet beyond. He missed that one. Instead of two, he made five.

Weiskopf's lead once was cut to two strokes, but he pulled away in the late going.

He scored a two-putt birdie on the par-five sixth, once saved par from a bunker and got back in firm control with a 25-foot birdie putt on the difficult 17th.

Oldfield breaks world shot record

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Brian Oldfield tossed the shot put farther than anyone in the world had before and said, "I tell you, it felt effortless."

"I was on the wall of the circle before it hit, and I knew it was great," the 29-year-old professional said after setting the world record of 72 feet, 6½ inches Friday night.

Using a spinning, discus-style delivery, Oldfield surpassed by four inces the amateur record of George Woods and by almost a foot Al Feuerbach's world outdoor mark of 71 feet, 7 inches.

After the throw Oldfield ran around the Cow Palace track in jubilation.

Distance runner Ben Jipcho of Kenya was a double winner in the fifth meet of the 1975 International Track Association professional track tour. He has won 15 straight races as a pro.

Steve Smith and Bob Seagran were slowed down in the featured pole vault event by a unsteady standards, and neither vaulted more than 17 feet, 3 inches, with Smith getting the victory and $2,000 in prize money.

Jipcho ran the mile in 4:01.7. World record holder Jim Ryun finished last.

An hour later Jipcho won the two-mile, giving him his 10th double victory as a professional. His time was 8:39.0.

Smith, Redbirds hammer Pirates

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Reggie Smith had four hits, including a triple that led off a six-run inning, to help the St. Louis Cardinals to an 18-4 rout of the Pittsburgh Pirates in exhibition baseball Saturday.

The Cards peppered the Pirates for 25 hits, although none of the runs came on homers. Pittsburgh had nine hits.

The game broke wide open in the Cardinals' fourth inning when they added six runs to their 2-0 margin to take an 8-0 lead. St. Louis pitcher John Curtis, the winner, had a two-run single during that inning to help his own cause.

Pittsburgh's Bruce Kison, who took the loss, was relieved by Ramon Hernandez in the sixth after the Cards scored two more runs. Larry Demery took over in the ninth, when the Cards erupted for seven more runs with the help of triples by Ken Rudolph and Ken Reitz and a double by Luis Melendez.

The Pirates' Richie Hebner hit the game's only home run in the sixth inning to score two runs.

Roberts falls short of new vault record

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — World record holder Dave Roberts hit the bar going up three times at 18 feet, 8 inches in an attempt to better his own world pole vault mark Saturday and settled for 18-1, matching the Texas Relays record.

The red-haired Roberts, who vaulted 18-6½ inches at the Florida Relays two weeks ago, blamed his fiberglass pole for his failure to set a new record.

"The pole I have is just too soft once I get past 18 feet," said Roberts. "I'm going to have to get another one even though I set the world record with this one."

Roberts, former NCAA champion at Rice University, easily cleared 18-1, the best ever for him in his home state. He's from Conroe, Tex.

The left-handed Roberts, who wore gaudy purple polka-dotted shorts, passed until the bar reached 17 feet. He easily cleared 17 feet, 17-6, and 18-1 before his three misses.

Paul Cummings of Brigham Young ran only the second sub-four minute mile in the 48 years of the Texas Relays with a time of 3 minutes, 59.8 seconds. The NCAA champion was one-tenth of a second off the meet record.

Two world record holders were disappointments in the high jump and shot put.

Dwight Stones, favoring a sore ankle, managed only 7-1 in the high jump, far off his world mark of 7-6⅝. But it was good enough for the first place medal.

Al Feuerbach, like Stones a member of the Pacific Coast Track Club, took first in the shot with a heave of 67-1¼, off his world mark of 71-7.

Feuerbach wasn't all that disappointed, saying, "I plan on setting a world record this year, but the national championships aren't until June, so 67 is not bad today."

NCAA indoor champion Texas-El Paso won its second relay of the meet by taking the four-mile. UTEP had won the distance medley on Friday.

Texas, showing precision baton passing, bolted to first place in the popular sprint relay in 39.8 seconds—just off the Texas Relays record. Marvin Nash's anchor beat back the challenging Arizona Wildcats.

New Illinois cage coach plans busy first week

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Lou Henson, selected Saturday as head coach at the University of Illinois, wasted no time in starting to work on his new job.

"For the next few days I'm going to contact as many players as I can," Henson said. "I want to spend all of the time recruiting."

Coach at New Mexico State University for the last nine seasons, Henson was named to succeed Gene Bartow, who resigned Wednesday to take over as head coach at national NCAA champion UCLA.

Illinois Athletic Director Cecil Coleman, who announced Henson's appointment, searched feverishly for a replacement for Bartow because Wednesday is the first day that high school players may sign national letters of intent.

Henson said he'll stay in Champaign until Wednesday, contacting prospective high school players.

Restrictions against Illinois by the National Collegiate Athletic Association limit the Illini to awarding only three basketball scholarships in each of the next two years. The restrictions are the result of earlier recruiting violations.

Henson said the restrictions will hurt, "but if you get the right three players you can help the program."

The 43-year-old Henson told a news conference he plans to remain at Illinois longer than Bartow, who resigned after serving only one season of a five-year contract. Bartow replaced retiring Coach John Wooden, who led the Bruins to their 10th NCAA championship in 12 years last week.

"I just think this team can be a national power," Henson said. "But I realize it won't be done overnight. I think it is important that this is a stable situation, and this is where we want to stay."

Henson led New Mexico State to a 175-70 record in his nine years there, including a 27-3 mark in 1970, NMSU's best ever. The Aggies finished third in the NCAA tournament that year and have been ranked nationally seven times. Henson was the Missouri Valley Conference's coach of the year last year.

Tony Yates, an assistant under Bartow, has agreed to remain at Illinois. The new coach said another aide to Bartow, Leroy Hunt, also was asked to stay, but may go with Bartow. Henson said he also wants to hire a high school coach for his staff.

KU's Rick Suttle wins school's Phog Allen award

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Rick Suttle, who was the leading scorer as Kansas worked its way to the Big Eight basketball championship last month, was named as the 1974 recipient of the Phog Allen Award.

Dale Greenlee, from Rockford, Ill., and Roger Morningstar, from Dundee, Ill., also were honored at the university's annual basketball awards dinner Saturday night, receiving Dutch Lonborg awards for being the team's most inspirational players. Both are senior guards.

Suttle, a senior center from East St. Louis, Ill., averaged 14.6 points a game during the 1974-75 season and the 1,156 points he scored for Kansas rank him seventh among its all-time high scorers.

He became the seventh man to win the Allen award, named after the man who became a living legend in his 39 years of coaching at Kansas. Jo Jo White was a three-time winner of the most valuable player designation in 1967, 1968 and 1969.

Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins is seeking his fourth American League batting title. He was leading the league in mid-May.

Claude Osteen put on waivers by St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals placed Claude Osteen on waivers Friday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Osteen, 35, ranks third among the National League's active pitchers in total victories. In 17 seasons in the major leagues, he had a record of 189-179. He has pitched for six teams.

The Cardinals obtained Osteen in a deal last August with the Houston Astros.

He appeared in eight games for the Cardinals in 1974, ending the season with an 0-2 record.

St. Louis used him in five exhibition games this spring; he compiled a 1-1 mark. His earned run average was 3.91.

New call to arms by party coalition

"If we allow ourselves to be deceived by the myth of detente, reduce our military strength and permit our alliances to erode, we may well suffer irreversible defeats which could imperil the safety of democracy in America."

A Barry Goldwater speech? A Pentagon news release?

Neither one, instead it is from the Coalition for a Democratic Majority, an organization of moderate and liberal Democratic members of Congress.

The coalition spoke out last week on what it sees as this nation's "drift toward vulnerability and timidity." It called for more defense spending to offset the Soviet Union's continuing military build-up, which it said "has no peacetime parallel in world affairs."

Urging fellow Democrats — who hold the key to the nation's defense capability — to confront "the reality of our international and military situation," the coalition called for an increase in both nuclear and conventional military strength.

"The best diplomatic signal the United States could give the world now would be a sharp increase in our defense programs, going beyond the programs recommended...," said the coalition's report. It warned that the U.S. was slipping into a lethargic mood similar to that which affected Great Britain, France and the United States in the years leading up to World War II.

The coalition said liberals and Democrats must take the lead in getting the country back to a position of military strength, or within two years the military balance will tip decisively in favor of the Soviet Union.

Among the coalition liberals who signed the statement was Rep. Richard Bolling of Missouri. We hope the organization's irrefutable arguments will carry some weight with the Congress as a whole, which so far has shown little appreciation for the serious situation the nation faces.

How our leaders place the blame

WASHINGTON — Every morning the President meets with his chief aides to decide who they are going to blame that day for anything that went wrong.

Buchwald

It is a very important meeting because, when you allocate blame in the White House, you have to make sure it doesn't backfire on you.

The sessions go something like this.

"Things are going very bad in South Vietnam. Who are we going to blame for it?"

"Congress, of course, Mr. President."

"But we blamed Congress for losing the war in Cambodia. Can we also blame them for the retreats in Vietnam?"

"Certainly, Mr. President. Don't forget the domino theory. If we blame Congress for one domino falling we can blame them for the next one and so on."

"Okay, Ron, you can announce today Congress is responsible for Thieu losing Hue, Quang Tri and Da Nang."

"Any particular senator or representative, Mr. President?"

"No, I think we should blame them as a group. If we start naming names we'll only offend somebody."

"All right, now we come to Portugal. Who do we blame for Portugal going to the left?"

"Why don't we blame the Soviet Union?"

"That could hurt detente. We have a deal with the Soviets that we don't blame them for anything and they don't blame us for anything. If we start blaming them for Portugal they'll start blaming us for Chile."

"Well, can we blame Castro for Portugal going Communist?"

"Why not? He's as good as anybody.'

"I'd like to talk about inflation, Mr. President. Who should we blame for inflation today?"

"Congress?"

"We blamed them yesterday, sir."

"I forgot that. What about the American people? If they didn't consume so much energy, we would be able to lick inflation."

"That's a good idea, Mr. President. We haven't blamed the American people in over a month for anything."

"Ron, you can say that unless the American people bite the bullet they will be contributing to a hopeless economy for which I cannot be held responsible."

"What about the budget deficit?"

"That's no problem. We blame the Democrats for that."

"Right. Now we get on to the Middle East. Who do we blame for the breakdown in the negotiations?"

"Israel. I will say that if Israel had given a little more and was willing to accept a little less we would now probably have an agreement in the Middle East. How does that sound to you, Henry?"

"That's fine. While you're saying that, I will say that no one is to blame for the failure of my talks. In that way the Israelis can't get too mad at us."

"Is there anything else we have to blame somebody for?"

"We have the problem of the CIA involvement with Howard Hughes."

"That's easy. We blame the media for reporting it and jeopardizing our national security."

"Who do we blame for your low popularity showing in the polls?"

"We could blame the problems of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations which I inherited and am trying to deal with forthrightly and to the best of my ability."

"That's good. One last item. We had a $900 million trade surplus this month — the best showing this year."

"I think I better take the blame for that myself. After all I'm the President of the United States and, as Harry Truman said, 'The buck stops here.' "

Pampering Goldwater paid off for French

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is usually one of the first on his feet to oppose giving away U.S. military secrets. Yet two years ago, he helped the French obtain a highly classified, American-made component for a jet engine.

The senator was won over by French officials who courted him assiduously at the Paris air show in May 1973. He responded by cabling the White House from Paris, urging that the sensitive component be shared with the French.

The story is told in State Department cables, which we have now obtained. What the French wanted was a "core element" that General Electric had developed for jet engines. The project had been financed from Pentagon funds for the B-1 bomber.

The French, seeking to revive the European aircraft industry, wanted to join forces with GE to adapt the new engine to commercial use. However, the White House rejected GE's application for an export license on several grounds. Most importantly, the engine was declared to be of strategic importance to the United States.

Still the French persisted. The late President Pompidou took the matter up personally with President Nixon in the summer of 1972, competent sources report.

The following year, the French worked on Goldwater when he showed up at the Paris air show. An official named Henri Ziegler, according to the State Department cables, "welcomed Senator Goldwater to the air show" and "arranged flight in A-300 airbus."

The president of a French aircraft company was "host at stag luncheon in Senator's honor on June 1." The same day, the secretary-general of the air show, Jacques Maillet, "called on Senator ... at embassy." The next day, Ziegler took over again as Goldwater's "official host at luncheon."

But the crowning touch came when the French air force chief, Gen. Claude Grigault, arranged for Goldwater to pilot a Mirage-3 jet fighter.

This is the senator's favorite sport. He prides himself on having flown every plane made in the United States. "Whenever there's a new plane around," he told us, "I want to fly it."

According to the cables, a Bell helicopter whisked Goldwater to Bretigny where, with a copilot named Capt. Charrin, the senator flew the Mirage-3.

Sometime during the hectic courtship of Goldwater, the French took him aside and explained their great desire for the GE engine component. Goldwater obligingly cabled President Nixon's notorious Mr. Fix-it, Peter Flanigan, at the White House on June 1:

"Suggest you contact the President immediately, urging approval of the General Electric ... agreement," wired Goldwater. "This will be most advantageous to our aircraft industry but, more importantly, advantagous to the relations between France and the U. S. It will have absolutely no harm on our engine industry. In fact, in my opinion, it will help it, and it needs help. Please follow through immediately."

Flanigan's reply was on the wires that evening: "I agree with your telegram ... and appreciate your interest in this matter. This issue is well in hand."

A few days later, the White House ban on the GE export license was lifted. How much the Goldwater cable influenced the decision can only be speculated, but it is known that Nixon was extremely sensitive to pressure from Goldwater.

The senator told us he had sent the cable "based on meetings with the French." He could not remember the details of the GE-French agreement but recalled that "it had something to do with motors," he said.

PHANTOM CONGRESSMAN: Ex-Rep. Frank Clark, D-Pa., apparently thinks he still represents Pennsylvania's 25th district despite his defeat for re-election last November by Rep. Gary Myers, R-Pa.

Clark has just sent 150,000 congressional newsletters to his former constituents at a cost to the taxpayers of more than $10,000 in mailing expense, althoug he hasn't been a congressman since January.

Under the law, former congressmen are permitted to continue using the free mailing privilege until April 1 after they leave office. This is intended to give them time to clean up their official correspondence.

But Clark misused the privilege to bombard his former constituents with newsletters reporting on "Accomplishments in the 25th District."

The newsletter, which contains a half-dozen promotional photos referring to himself as "Congressman Clark," gives the impression that he still represents the 25th district.

He invited former constituents to business "as usual" at his "offices" in Washington and Pennsylvania, without mentioning the fact that he is now a professional business consultant and is no longer their congressman.

Contacted in Pennsylvania, Clark told us he saw nothing wrong with spending $10,000 of the taxpayers' money to mail out newsletters. "The franking privilege extension," he said, "was designed to allow former congressmen to report to their constituents."

Bicentennial lethargy

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON — If the Bicentennial program doesn't get going pretty soon, after 200 years of background preparation, we may have to wait another 100 years to get ready for the tricentennial.

President Johnson had a dream to plan for this year's celebration, but it got snarled in politics and internal strife. Then Nixon took over and gave Johnson's commission a new title. It is now called the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration and John Warner, a Virginia Republican, is the boss. The Congress has allocated $10 million a year budget to the ARBA (which is about twice the entire earliest recorded budget for the whole United States government in 1779-80). The 50 states are supposed to get $1.25 million to put on their own show and the remainder $8.75 million is to be spent by the ARBA to "stimulate and coordinate" everything from books, pamphlets, performances, music, shows, etc. with a Bicentennial historic relationship.

A book put out by the ARBA has already been printed and distributed to the state committees (if such exist), local Chambers of Commerce and even press offices, but it is an inch thick and it does not contain very much usable information. If you try to get in touch with the official ARBA office in Washington you get the typical D.C. run-around or no answer at all. In a hit-and-miss fashion, this "Official Master Register of Bicentennial Activities" contains a list of 3,000 events which may or may not occur some time between this March and December, 1976.

Where will the real meaning come from which will celebrate the 200th anniversary of the birth of a nation? Various persons have been assigned to search the history books and encyclopedias to summarize the American Revolution with its defeats and victories and the personalities responsible for them. Unfortunately many of the current biographies of our Founding Fathers are debunking their characters with scandal, corruption and gossip.

Let this 200th anniversary not be a slipshod performance, but a true American dedication to our American ideals upon which the original 13 colonies have grown to 50 separate states who cling to the principles upon which they were founded.

The city of Boston, which begins its celebration April 18, boasts that the Bicentennial began there and plans 200 exhibits with a sense of the past. It suggests, however, that instead of riding a horse (although it will be enacted), Paul Revere's "ride" will be taken by rapid transit. Philadelphia also claims distinction with its Liberty Bell, Independence Hall and many other cradles of liberty. New York is beginning early on May 23 with its parade from the Battery to City Hall Park, followed by a week of Bicentennial activities.

But what of Washington, the nation's capital, where the official ARBA is located? Its celebration begins with the Cherry Blossom Festival with its annual parade and crowning the College Girl of the Year. Kennedy Center, Wolf Trap, other theaters, museums and historic sites will tie their activities to the Bicentennial tag and hope to attract more tourists than usual. The flock of tourists anticipated throughout the Bicentennial will cause problems for all means of transportation, hotels, and restaurants unless the energy crisis cramps the movement.

The time to prepare for local, state, regional and national Bicentennial programs has already passed, but if all committees beginning with ARBA get going, a serious historic celebration appropriate to the occasion can still be accomplished.

A conservative view

New data on crime shocking

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK

WASHINGTON — The mail brings a preliminary report from the FBI on serious crime in 1974. The orderly figures march across the page like so many columns of tiny ants, and they tell a frustrating story: Serious crime increased last year by 17 per cent. It was the largest annual increase in 45 years.

Kilpatrick

The figures are the best figures we have, but they remain incomplete. "It is estimated," says Attorney General Edward H. Levi, "that about one-third of the violent crimes committed go unreported."

In the whole of the FBI's gloomy report, one finds not a single ray of encouragement. Last year saw an increase of 11 per cent in violent crimes, of 17 per cent in property crimes. The number of serious offenses increased by 15 per cent in large cities, by 20 per cent in suburbs, by 21 per cent in rural areas, by 24 per cent in small towns. Murder, rape, robbery, assault — in every classification, the trend is up.

Why? So far as crimes against property are concerned, the depressed economy doubtless is a contributing cause. When men are unemployed, broke, and hungry, men steal — but that theory does not explain the dismaying increase in crimes of violence. Levi has no excuses: "These figures represent a dismal and tragic failure on the part of our present system of criminal justice."

What is wrong with the system? "We must understand," says Levi, "that an effective criminal justice system has to emphasize deterrence. There are many causes of crime, but among them is the failure of our system to move quickly and effectively to detect and punish offenders."

By coincidence, the FBI's report comes at a time when the system of criminal justice is undergoing fresh examination. Tom Wicker's book on the Attica prison riot, "A Time to Die," has provoked national attention. Some of the reaction is exemplified by Garry Wills' brooding reflections in The New York Review of Books. Wills sees the prison system as a total failure. He speaks for liberals, but many conservatives, for different reasons, will concur in his conclusion.

In the liberal view, the business of sending men to prison can be rationalized, though not justified, on three grounds: revenge, deterrence, and rehabilitation. Wills scorns them all. Revenge is unworthy of an enlightened society, deterrence is ineffective, rehabilitation is a failure. He offers no better ideas. His sympathies, like Wicker's, lie with the convicts.

One is reminded, in passing, of Paine's famous attack on Burke: "He pities the plumage, but forgets the dying bird." My own sympathies lie with the victims of violent crime. The purpose of criminal law is not to seek revenge, but to seek justice. The first object, in my own view, is not to deter, but to punish. Rehabilitation is all very well, but it misses the point. The primary idea is not to turn the criminal into a good citizen; the primary idea is to lock him up. Incarceration — plain and simple incarceration — has its merits.

Wills weeps that prison "destroys" the inmates. Well, some of us will weep dry-eyed. Here in Washington, police are searching for a 34-year-old man charged with running a tremendous heroin operation. The man is accused of corrupting and recruiting teenagers, turning them into addicts and peddlers. Assume, for the moment, that the suspect is arrested, indicted, fairly tried with every protection of due process of law, and found guilty. What then? I would hang him from a gallows in the nearest public square or, that failing, lock him up for life. This would destroy him? Let me dry my eyes.

The new attorney general is on the right track. Our system of criminal justice must be revitalized with a view toward punishment that is quick and effective. Whether the criticism comes from left or right — from Wicker, Wills, Levi or, for that matter, me — there is general agreement that the present system doesn't work. The FBI's figures provide grim evidence to that effect. We have to find something better, and we must find it soon.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

With immigration averaging more than 350,000 people annually since 1960, and birth and fertility rates declining, immigration constitutes a larger proportion of the U.S. population growth than in the past. The World Almanac notes that 22 per cent of the 1973 population gain of 1.5 million resulted from a net immigration of 344,000.

Opening lead — 4 ♣

By Oswald & James Jacoby

South wasn't proud of his three notrump call, but he had that allergy about being shut out by a preemptive bid. In any event the game was rubber bridge, the hour late and South wanted to get home.

If West had opened a heart South would almost surely have found himself left with an unfinished rubber, but West opened his fourth best club and South counted quickly to nine tricks.

He went right up with dummy's ace of clubs. He needed two entries to dummy and he could not afford a heart shift.

He led a spade at trick two. East ducked and South was in with the king. He led out high diamonds. The queen might drop but South didn't really care. He needed just four diamond tricks and they were certain.

An American ordeal part 1

A third rate burglary becomes a conspiracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thomas Jefferson, the third President of the United States, made this observation on Aug. 19, 1785:

"He who permits himself to tell a lie once finds it much easier to do it a second and third time, till at length it becomes habitual; he tells lies without attending to it, and truths without the world's believing him. This falsehood of the tongue leads to that of the heart, and in time depraves all its good dispositions."

One hundred and eighty-seven years later, the 37th President of the United States met with his most trusted assistant at four minutes after ten in the morning of June 23, 1972. Routinely, Richard M. Nixon and H.R. Haldeman discussed a variety of subjects, none of them of great moment.

"Now," Haldeman said with the tone of a man with a list, "on the investigation, you know the Democratic break-in thing, we're back in the problem area because the FBI is out of control ..."

The President told Haldeman to tell the FBI, "Don't go any further into this case, period!" The reasons, he made clear, were political but the pretext would be national security. Then, the two men casually moved on to other subjects while in a basement across the street from the White House a reel of tape quietly turned.

Thus was begun a process by which a "third-rate burglary" five days before was turned into a third-rate conspiracy and, 26 months later, a world leader was toppled.

Now, in retrospect, as many new facts drop into place and more people are free to discuss them, that process resembles not so much a twilight of the gods or the fall of a king as it does the flight of a desperate man running with blind instinct from tree to tree and doorway to doorway until there were no trees or doorways left.

Successive visitors to the Oval Office were told diametrically opposite stories. Charges were denied with righteous indignation, even sermons. Denials were amended with "later information," which then became a final statement of position until that in turn proved "inoperative." Nothing seemed to hold.

The country was rocked by lunges and turns. The public credulity was strained and the system itself was stretched to the edge in traumatic clashes of great issues and mean causes.

The long road twisted and straightened, dipped and leveled, but always it was narrowing. Finally, only a cul de sac remained, with one man in it, the President of the United States.

The aspect of the man and his situation led the Secretary of Defense to think of the unthinkable: was it possible that military power might be used to keep the President in office? For different reasons, the Director of the FBI worried about a possible coup from other directions. Such were those tenuous days.

Richard Nixon finally went out quietly, in tears. But even at the end, at the dead end, he groped and hesitated and wavered for days, while a leaderless country held its breath. Now, months later, that singular drama can be better understood.

Much of the record is in. The tapes of private conversations which might have been selectively preserved for history have been made public, and many of the participants are talking to reporters. The curtain between private plot and public piety lowers, and the mosaic fills in.

The immediate chase is over and the larger pursuit of history begins. Richard Nixon has retired to the shadows, where he is seen but dimly, yet better perceived ...

From tree to tree, doorway to doorway.

President Nixon told a televised news conference on Aug. 27, 1972 that no one currently employed in the White House or the Administration was involved in the Watergate break-in.

"What really hurts is if you try to cover it up," he added, in the third month of the coverup, 57 days after he ordered the FBI off the trail.

And four months after that homily, with the tape recorders still going, Richard Nixon met with an assistant and discussed clemency for the Watergate burglars to buy their silence.

Two months after that, on March 20, 1973, President Nixon met privately with the man who had to carry the ball for him in the Senate, Hugh Scott, the Republican minority leader.

"Hugh," he said, "I have nothing to hide. The White House has nothing to hide."

Scott said he would pass this on to reporters outside, on his own authority.

"Hell, no," said Nixon, "say it on my authority!"

Seven hours later, same day, same place, he told Haldeman they had to fight for executive privilege because they had plenty to hide.

"We just can't allow that sort of thing to come out," he said. "... You've got the story of a cover-up, that's what's involved."

And the day after he told Scott he had nothing to hide, Nixon discussed cover stories and hush money for the burglars with John Dean. The President said they could raise a million dollars but there might be practical difficulties. He did not mention moral difficulties.

The road twisted and turned, dipped and leveled but always it narrowed. Suddenly out of the thicket, John Dean broke loose and headed in the opposite direction, toward the prosecutors. What would he tell them?

On April 25, 1973, in the 10th month of the cover-up, President Nixon sat with Haldeman and reviewed the tape of his conversation a month before with Dean, now a defector. And in the basement across the street a new reel of tape quietly turned.

Between them, in great detail, the two men in the Oval Office evolved a scenario to explain the converation with Dean. It sounded like a rehearsal.

"You're smoking him out on what he thinks the alternatives are," said Haldeman.

"Yeah," said the President.

"You're pumping him."

"Yeah."

Later, Richard Nixon told his assistant, "you, Ehrlichman and I have got to put the wagons up around the President on this particular conversation. I just wonder if the son of a bitch had a recorder on him."

The President wondered aloud about that all day. At midnight, he was still wondering and worrying about a prismatic world of tapes within tapes within tapes. Like looking in a mirror in front of him with a mirror behind him and seeing mirrors on to an unknowable infinity.

Two days later, President Nixon needed a new FBI director. Pat Gray resigned at 2 p.m. April 27 after disclosure that he burned Watergate evidence. Two hours after that, responding to an urgent summons, William Ruckelshaus walked into the Oval Office. As he now recalls the meeting, he found the President "very agitated."

The president asked him to take over the FBI. Ruckelshaus demurred; he was content as a director of the Environmental Protection Agency. The President pressed.

"Bill," he said, "as your President, speaking on behalf of your country, I want you to know your country needs you in this job."

The thought crossed Ruckelshaus' mind that he had actually never heard that ringing line before outside of a Fletcher Knebel novel. But he agreed to take the job temporarily. Accordingly, he asked:

"Mr. President, since I'll have to run the FBI investigation of Watergate, I have to ask you, were you involved in the coverup at all?"

The President assured him he was not. Ruckelshaus found the answer "very convincing," especially as the President added:

"Bill, I want you to conduct a thorough investigation. I want you to get to the bottom of this and leave no stone unturned. And I want you to report back to me directly."

(Ruckelshaus never saw or heard from the President again. The next time he heard from the White House at all was six months and two jobs later when he was fired as deputy attorney general.)

One minute after the Oval Office door closed on the departing new director of the FBI, the President picked up the phone and, nervously, began pumping Henry Petersen of the Justice Department: had Dean told the prosecutors anything incriminating about the President? Petersen said no. The President asked the same question five more times that day.

Nothing seemed to be working. The engine room was leaking, fire was spreading on A deck and, most ominous, the captain smelled smoke as high as the bridge.

He scuttled Haldeman, Ehrlichman and Dean. Somehow, the crisis ended and the captain was able to quiet the passengers, most of them.

But he may have known or sensed even then that he wouldn't make it to shore.

David Eisenhower, his son-in-law, now recalls that time in this perspective:

"I don't think the gravity of the situation hit him until that spring. Then he felt that ultimately he'd be held accountable. He was definitely considering resignation.

"He'd bring it up to the family. 'You don't think I should resign, do you?' he'd say. He seemed to want our reassurance to stay on."

All sources agree that until the final denouement, the spring of '73 was Richard Nixon's roughest time on the downhill slope. Clearly, there was a break in his rhythm and a wobble in his vaunted self-control. Tapes later showed that in private conversation he had begun to stammer at stress points.

May 1, the morning after he announced the departure of his two most trusted assistants, he blew up at the sight of a young FBI agent already stationed outside Haldeman's office. The President literally grabbed him by the lapels and shoved him out of sight.

The night before, on the way to the Oval Office, he noted a handful of reporters watching and said to the man next to him, a loyal speech writer, "walk with me — unless you feel it'll hurt you."

After the speech announcing the resignation of Haldeman and Ehrlichman, he wept. Then, on apparent impulse, he walked into the darkened press room of the White House and, with great emotion, told the startled reporters, "I hope you give me hell every time you think I'm wrong. I hope I'm worthy of your trust." Then he walked out.

An extraordinary moment in an extraordinary life. What did it mean? Cynical Nixon watchers might wonder if it was a new scenario. Compassionate Nixon watchers might wonder whether, in this rare moment of spontaneity, this "cramped and inhibited" man saw the future and was somehow crying for help.

Three weeks later, in the same room, to the same people, Richard Nixon issued a statement flatly denying any part or knowledge of a coverup or offer of executive clemency. The denial could not have been more comprehensive and it came in the 11th month of the cover-up.

In the 12th month, John Dean testified that the President had known and did take part in the cover-up, and in the 13th month a man named Butterfield revealed the existence of a White House taping system. Two days later it was dismantled, too late, too late. The battle of the tapes was on.

Pushed and pressed, Richard Nixon resisted and yielded, argued and fell silent, fought and retreated, slowly, at a maximum cost to his pursuers, one backward step at a time, behind a dazzling array of banners: national security, executive privilege, separation of powers, the sanctity of the grand jury, the protection of due process, the confidentiality of his exalted office. As each was shot down, another took its place.

Nothing seemed to work. He fired the special prosecutor for going to court for the tapes and three days later, after a national uproar, yielded the tapes. He "abolished" the office of special prosecutor and a short time later had to tolerate the appointment of a new one.

He promised him cooperation and fought him in the courts. He gave up tapes and then had to explain an 18-minute gap. He denounced the press repeatedly but could not escape it. He ordered a military alert because of a crisis in the Mideast and, true to Jefferson's prophecy, was widely disbelieved. He told the world, "I am not a crook," and a few moonths later was told he owed the government $465,787 in back taxes and penalties, and his tax man went to jail for fraud.

And now it was spring 1974, and summer could not be far behind. The final unraveling began.

On the night of April 29, in the 22nd month of the coverup, Richard Nixon looked squarely into the red eye of a television camera and said that the stack of presidential transcripts he was about to make public "will tell it all."

The transcripts, he said, "will at last, once and for all, show that what I knew and what I did with regard to the Watergate brekk-in and coverup were just as I described them to you from the very beginning."

If he didn't know it before, he knew within eight days that that was not true, that he had not told "it all" and that he had not told it honestly.

On May 5, 6, 7, we now know, he listened to a number of tapes. Among them were the recordings of his talks with Haldeman on June 23, 1972, in which he ordered the FBI out of Watergate for political reasons.

He listened to those tapes in early May, 1974, and by his later admission, recognized that what he had withheld from the prosecutors, from the courts, from the Congress and from the people, contained "potential problems."

"At the time," said Richard Nixon, a lawyer, "I did not realize the extent of the implications." But still there were those "potential problems," and he did not tell his own attorneys or staff. Knowing what he knew, he nonetheless allowed to happen or caused to happen a titantic struggle in the Congress and the Supreme Court of the United States.

And on May 7, he announced through his chief attorney that he would not turn over any more tapes to the special prosecutor or the House Judicary Committee. The last battle was on.

Before it was over, the president had 13 attorneys working for him. The second in command was John McCahill, whose job was to prepare a defense against impeachment in the House and trial in the Senate. He recalled this little-known phase of the Nixon dissent:

"It was like shaving in the dark. Here we were trying to construct a defense but the client never supplied us with one. In a normal case, an attorney tells the client, this and this and is alleged, what do you say to these allegations? But we never got clear answers."

McCahill became so desperate late in the game that he approached a man close to the President and pleaded:

"For God's sake, he has to lead his defense. He has to tell us what it is. Just point us in the right direction. We can't make it up as we go along."

The client did not become more helpful.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hoehns, Mora, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Otis Brown, Cole Camp.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a long white gown of sheer organza over taffeta. Her bibbed bodice was enhanced with a lace stand-up collar and long sleeves. The A-line skirt flowed to a chapel train and her lace-trimmed juliet veil was secured with a seed pearl-trimmed cap. Her only jewelry was pearl earrings, a gift from the groom.

Mrs. Wayne Craig, matron of honor, wore a long blue empire dress styled with a bib front. Wayne Craig was best man.

Following a reception at the Grotzinger home, the couple left on a honeymoon. The bride wore a three-piece blue knit suit as her going-away outfit.

Garrett-Shull

Maplewood Church was the setting for the 6 p.m. March 18 wedding of Miss Linda Garrett and Ralph I. Shull.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold R. Garrett, 1617 East Seventh, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. John E. Shull, Smithton.

The Rev. H. James Kane performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with white gladioli and blue delphinium. Mrs. Orville Woolery was the organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long white satin gown with long fitted sleeves, flounced with Alencon lace. Her skirt was edged with lace and tiny seed pearls and her veil of illusion was framed in lace, sweeping a cathedral length train.

Mrs. Joyce Smith, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a long blue, long-sleeved dress trimmed with small white flowers. John H. Shull, brother of the groom, was best man.

The couple is at home at 700 West Third.

About the marriage license ...

In a story on marriage licenses in last Sunday's bridal edition, it was reported that couples who wish to get married must apply at the Recorder of Deeds office in the County Court House for their marriage license.

Mrs. Naomi Brown, Pettis County recorder of deeds, originally said couples should come in and see her about one month before the wedding.

Wednesday she said there is only a three-day waiting period in Missouri. The recorder of deeds office is not open on Saturday, she said.

Leg lengthening

If your figure is long waisted and long through the torso with legs that are shorter than average DO wear pants, making sure they're long enough to cover the top of your foot yet not so long they touch the floor. Skirts should cover your knee and the top of your calf. Keep your waistline disguised with sweaters and long, knitted evening clothes.

Wins dollar

Joan Klein, Smithton, was recently awarded a "Polly Dollar" for a suggestion she submitted to the "Polly's Pointers" column which appears daily in The Democrat-Capital.

Too anxious

'Twas March, and lo, I ventured out,
The sun was warm, new life seemed all about.
A robin with his head held high
Felt spring was here — and so did I.
But soon March winds began to blow,
The surprised robin caught now in the snow
Looked for some shelter — cold and wet,
Ah, no, it was not springtime yet.
The weather warmed and flowers began to sprout,
It must be spring, I thought, without a doubt.
So, around my garden did I go,
March winds grew cold and there was snow.
The sun came out after days of gloom,
My little crocuses began to bloom
In colors, purple, yellow, white,
Like Easter eggs, a very lovely sight,
And deep inside one was a busy bee,
I felt 'twas spring now, and so did he,
But neither of us could really know
That fickle March would bring more cold, more snow,
I wonder what happened to the bee?
There on the walk an earthworm did I see,
Stiff from the cold for he had found
He came too soon from out the deep warm ground,
When it is cold now I can stay inside
But these wee creatures have no place to hide,
Now March is past. What will April bring?
The little creatures — and I — hope it's spring.

Boehms celebrate 50th anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Boehm, 1119 East 13th, will observe their golden wedding anniversary April 11.

They were married April 11, 1925, in Boonville, and have spent their married life in Boonville and Sedalia.

Mr. and Mrs. Boehm have three children, Bill Boehm, Jr., 2320 South Engineer; Mrs. Dorothy Broaddus, 1620 East 16th; and Tom Boehm, Boonville; eleven grandchildren and three great-granddaughters.

Fashionably figured

If you're tall and thin stand straight and easy: you've got the figure that's designed for fashion. Wear big, bold prints in bright colors, stripes, plaids and lots of crisp black and white. Bulky knit sweaters were made for you.

Abstract silver

Silver jewelry is back in swing this year. For example, there are two circles of silver banded with silver strands for the neck. It is dramatic and abstract and looks great with open-neck shirts and sweaters.

DIANE SAYS:

Very few stores carry the shorter zippers needed for children's clothing and adult hip hugger slacks. Longer zippers can be cut off to fit very easily. If your slacks have a waistband measure from the bottom where the teeth start and snip the edge of the tape on each side at the needed length. This will show where it goes under the waistband on each side. Cut off ½ inch above the snip so it will slip under the waistband letting the waistband act as the stop. Sew in as usual being careful not to pull the slide up until the zipper is sewed in or you might pull it off.

If your slacks are the type without a waistband the zipper must be cut off at the bottom. Measure the length needed from the top to the bottom. Mark and bar-tack across the zipper and cut 1 inch below the bar-tack. Be careful when you sew across the zipper at the bottom not to break your needle.

Hint: Do you have zippers that do not pull up and down as easily as they should? Take an old candle and rub up and down on the back a few times, then pull the slide up and down a few times. This relubricates them so that they work easier.

New AMC Pacer.

"...the freshest, most creative, most people-oriented auto to be born in the U.S. in 15 years."
-Motor Trend.

We started with four big people. Gave them plenty of elbow, shoulder, hip, leg and headroom. Then we built Pacer around them.
So Pacer is wide. So wide, that you get the passenger comfort of most mid-size cars.
Because Pacer is wide, it rides like a much bigger car. The wide stance makes for surer, stabler handling, too.
Even Pacer's doors are different. The passenger door is much wider than the driver's to make it easier for everybody to get in and out.
In back, there's a hatch that opens wide and seat that folds down to give you lots of wide-open cargo space.

One thing about the men of the engineering profession: they give credit where credit is due. Which may explain all the nice letters and phone calls we've received from Detroit since our new Rabbit has been out. Why all the praise?

A Rabbit is very fast. And although we obviously don't recommend 93 mph (please obey all speed limits), it is reassuring to know as you're about to get onto a hectic expressway, that a Rabbit has the power for great acceleration. From 0 to 50 in only 8.2 seconds. That's quicker than a Monza 2 + 2.

A Rabbit is very thrifty. In the recent 1975-model Federal Environmental Protection Agency fuel economy tests, the Rabbit averaged 38 miles to the gallon on the highway. It averaged a nifty 24 in tougher stop-and-go city traffic.

As big inside as some mid-size cars.

The Rabbit is a sub-compact sized car. That's on the outside. Open the door and it's a different story. 80% of the space in the car is devoted to functional room. There's actually more head and leg room inside than in some mid-size cars.

You get this feeling of roominess immediately, as you stretch out behind the wheel and look out through the huge front windshield. Visibility is incredible.

The main engineering feat that makes all this room possible is our revolutionary transverse engine, or stated more simply, an engine that is mounted sideways. Besides adding space, placing the engine in this manner, and slanting it, has a lot to do with why the Rabbit gets such good gas mileage. For now you have a very low silhouetted front end which means lower wind resistance, which means better gas mileage. The Rabbit comes only one way, as a Hatchback. And you don't pay a penny more for that extra door. In addition to the 2-door model shown, there is a 4-door available. Four doors plus a Hatchback. That's a lot of ins and outs in one car.

How we got it to handle so easily.

The best way to describe driving a Rabbit is that it just feels right. The rack-and-pinion steering, designed exclusively for the Rabbit, allows you to feel in complete control, especially on fast, tight turns.

Another VW exclusive, an independent stabilizer rear axle, means independent wheel travel for more riding comfort and added safety on rough roads.

As is true on only two Detroit cars, the Eldorado and Toronado, the Rabbit has front-wheel drive for road-hugging ability. The firm and sporty ride of the car is enhanced by rigid unitized body/chassis construction, controlled spring and shock rates and longer suspension travel.

Owner's Security Blanket.

To make sure your Rabbit lives a lively and a carefree life, it's backed by the most advanced car coverage plan in the automotive industry: The Volkswagen Owner's Security Blanket with exclusive Computer Analysis.†

All for $2,999*

Lately, a lot of automotive executives have been giving speeches on "the car of the future." They see it as being small, low-priced, but with increased interior dimensions and more economical performance.

Ladies and gentlemen of the automotive industry, your car of the future, our Rabbit, is here today.

And it will only cost you $2,999 to try it out.

New guide can help you save gas money

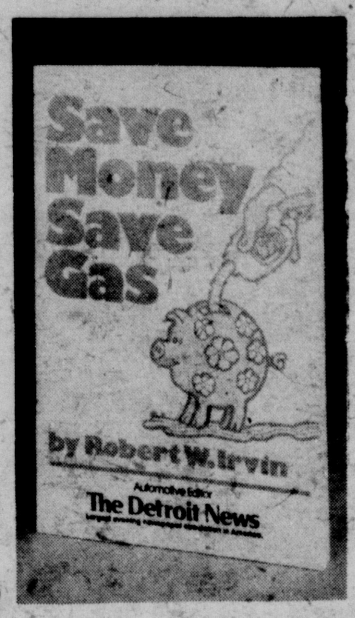
"Save Money, Save Gas" by Robert W. Irvin, Enterprise Publications, New York — Other than to stop eating, there is practically no way to save money readily than to cut down on gasoline consumption. If you are typical, you may not be able to reduce the amount of driving you do. But Bob Irvin, the dean of automotive editors, has written a definitive guide to help you make that driving cost a whole lot less.

Irvin writes, "One thing is true for every car — you can improve fuel economy by better maintenance and car care." And he proves it.

Defining a tune-up as checking the carburetor, the engine compression, cleaning or replacing the air cleaner element, gapping or replacing the spark plugs or distributor points, Irvin explains the benefits.

The author quotes the U.S. Environmental Agency which says, "Keeping an automobile tuned up can, on the average, improve fuel economy 6 per cent as compared to an untuned automobile. However, an individual vehicle which is grossly maladjusted or undermaintained — for example, spark plug misfire, air filters clogged, carburetor improperly adjusted — can suffer significantly worse fuel economy penalties of 20 per cent or more."

Packed into the 95 pages of the book are numerous gas-saving tips that have eluded many writers on the subject. Irvin points out that Les Viland, an economy run veteran, is an advocate of waxing the vehicle, even the tires and fan blades, as an aid to better gasoline mileage.



Also cited is an Automobile Club of Michigan study showing that motorists who weave in and out of traffic on city streets can waste up to 43 per cent of their gasoline.

The book also contains valuable information on what gasoline economy you should expect from your car, how to get gas economy with tractors and recreation vehicles, the effects of tires and other equipment on mileage and how pollution controls bear on gas savings.

Irvin warns against fuel economy gadgets now on the market. A leading consumers organization has tested a number of these "miracle" devices and "has yet to find one that is beneficial."

One auto company did find a carburetor that helped realize a 66 per cent fuel savings. However, the carburetor would have cost $2,500 to produce.

"Save Money, Save Gas" has been called by its publisher an Insider's Guide to Gas Economy. Indeed it is. The price of the booklet is less than the price of the gas you can save in one fill-up after a tune-up. Irvin's work should be as much as part of a car owner's "musts" as a driver's license.

Leaded gas could 'kill' conver

Quite a job

The job of the catalytic converter is to change the "dragon's breath" of HC and CO pollutants into emissions of harmless carbon dioxide and water vapor. In order to achieve this environment plus, converters must avoid leaded gasoline and 1975 cars equipped with converters are designed to run on unleaded fuel and gasoline filler apertures only can accommodate nozzles from pumps issuing lead-free gasoline.

There's one "cat" that doesn't have nine lives. That's a catalytic converter on 1975 model cars. Prolonged use of leaded fuel will kill the effectiveness of the pollution-fighting unit.

The converter's job is to change carbon monoxide (CO) and hydrocarbon (HC) emissions into harmless carbon dioxide and water. Catalysts of ceramic beads and inert metallic pellets are used in the process.

Leaded fuel coats the pellet with lead deposits and renders them ineffective. As a result harmful emissions escape the muffler-like unit and enter the atmosphere. While the car would perform normally, pollution levels would exceed legislated levels.

Designed to function for a minimum of 50,000 miles, the converters also are expected to help improve gasoline mileage.

Unleaded gasoline is now available at most gas stations in the U.S. The gas is expected to be carried by outlets in Canada and Mexico, particularly in areas where U.S. cars frequently travel.

Should you be out of gas in an area where lead-free fuel is not available, then buy enough gas to get you to a station where the proper fuel is sold. A converter can tolerate an occasional usage of leaded fuel, since the heat of the oxidation will burn off lead deposits once unleaded fuel is reinstalled. The catalyst will then return to full efficiency.

To prevent inadvertent filling with leaded fuel, a smaller gas filler neck is found on 1975 cars. Thus nozzles at gas pumps will be adaptable for unleaded fuel, not for the leaded variety.

Gasoline saved

An estimated 15 million gallons of gasoline were saved in the State of New Jersey due to mandatory emissions inspection. An engine that is maintained for low emissions will also burn less fuel, explained Richard J. Sullivan of New Jersey's Department of Environmental Protection. As more cars are inspected in 1975, gas savings in the state could climb as high as 50 million gallons annually, Sullivan said.

Cars out-number almost everything today

More households own cars than own television sets, washers, dryers or air conditioners, and there are more than twice as many cars as houses in this country, according to the Automotive Information Council (AIC).

No other consumer product is as complicated or as misunderstood as the family car, a misunderstanding that sometimes leads to frustration when automotive service is involved.

A popular belief is that auto service is simply a matter of "take out the old part and put in a new one," much like replacing a tube in a television set. In truth, the possible combinations of problem causes and solutions are so infinite that no two may be exactly the same.

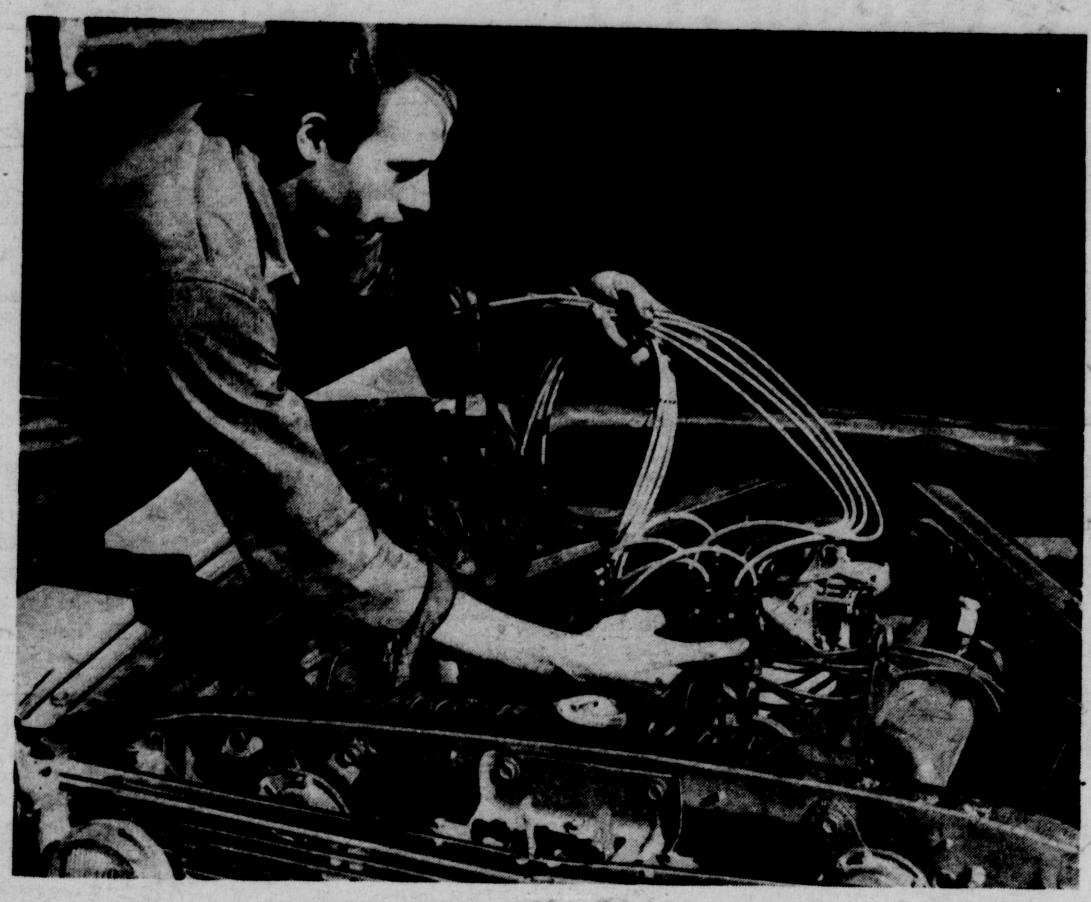
Auto service involves three very important factors, according to AIC: vehicle complexity, necessary judgment decisions by the service technician and communications between the service technician and the vehicle owner.

Today's vehicles are extremely complex. The automobile has about 15,000 parts and more than five miles of electrical wiring. Many of its components and systems depend on interrelated parts to function properly, like the steering and suspension system, for example.

Further complicating auto service today are increasingly more sophisticated plus popular consumer options like air conditioning, power steering and power brakes.

This doesn't include the special skills and knowledge required to service today's cars. For one technician to service your entire car, he would have to be an electrician, glass cutter, welder, air conditioning technician and radio repairman.

In addition to basic mechanical ability, he would require a knowledge of physics, chemistry, mathematics, hydraulics, as well as the knowledge he must have to use precision measuring tools to locate, diagnose and apply correct technical information to problem solving.



Not spaghetti

Spark plug wiring is among the most overlooked replacement item in a car's ignition system. Since wiring can deteriorate, most competent auto service people will check it routinely as part of a tune-up. In the interest of better communication between car owners and service personnel, the Automotive Information Council urges that both parties thoroughly discuss all possible service needs such as wiring before the job is done.

The second factor is judgment.

There is no practical way in the shop to simulate the way shock absorbers actually work under driving conditions, so technicians must use a certain amount of judgment. Most shocks lose their effectiveness after about 20 or 25 thousand miles — sometimes sooner.

It's easy to make clean-cut repair or replacement decisions that don't involve judgment — a broken spring or a bald tire. But it's more difficult — and subject to more second guessing — when the repair or replacement decision calls for a value judgment based on experience.

Judgment decisions usually are more difficult in the case of older, high mileage cars. As the car ages, repair costs invar ibly go up and trade-in value goes down. At some point the car owner may have to face a repair job that'll cost more than his car's worth.

But if a sympathetic technician recommends too little service to keep the cost down on an older car, he may not solve the problem. If, on the other hand, he recommends a complete overhaul to solve the problem, the car owner may think he is being sold more repair work than he thinks he needs.

The third factor in auto-service is communications.

To diagnose and solve vehicle problems or to satisfy specific customer service requests, the technician must be given as much information as possible. Conversely, the car owner has to understand exactly what work must — or may have to — be done to satisfy the need.

Poor communication often results in consumer dissatisfaction.

This is an example of a breakdown in communications: A motorist takes his car to a service shop, says he's taking a long trip and wants a complete tune-up. In his mind, a complete tune-up means replacing the points, plugs and condenser, and adjusting the carburetor.

To a top-notch service technician, a complete tune-up includes everything under the hood related to normal engine operation, and might require — if necessary — replacing the distributor cap and rotor, spark plug wires, overhauling the carburetor, adjusting valves and replacing worn belts. The car may run better than ever, but because of communications problem, the car owner is unhappy when the bill is higher than he expected.

The more you know about your car and how it operates, the better you will understand its complexity and appreciate the judgment decisions that the service technician has to make. Good comminications between you and the technician also will result in greater service satisfaction.

Know your dip stick

Do you know where the engine oil dip stick is located? Checking on oil levels is important to longer engine life. The dip stick will tell you when and how much oil needs to be added. Sometimes it will indicate oil should be changed. (Evidence of foreign matter or unusual thickness of the oil are possible clues.)

The inside story

A device allowing mechanics to look inside an automobile engine without disassembling the engine has been developed by American Optical. This flexible fiber rod contains its own source of cold light and saves service personnel time and labor.

Fond memories are preserved

Many a romantic has snipped a lock of his true love's hair as a memento. When a man has a life-long affection for automobiles, he has to find another way to keep fond memories alive.

That's why Harry Ginsburg, an auto parts store owner from Howell, Michigan, has amassed what may be the largest collection of auto emblems in private hands. Ginsburg has nearly 500 of these emblems dating from the turn of the century to some designed for vehicles not even on the road yet.

Birth of Ginsburg's hobby had a rather macabre beginning. He said, "When I was a child in Kimbal, West Virginia, there was a dangerous mountain road that took its toll of many cars. Times were really hard and we kids used to scavenge what we could from the wrecks. The little emblems caught my eye and I'd pop them off and put them in my pocket."

Later when the Ginsburg family moved to Howell, his father Sol opened an auto junk yard. As cars were scapped, young Harry would remove the emblems and store them in an old car trunk. Before he knew it he had collected a sizeable number of the decorative symbols.

Also important

Harry Ginsburg, Howell, Mich., auto parts dealer, helps restore a 1916 Saxton. The car is in perfect, driveable condition, showing that a car can last indefinitely if it is properly maintained. Ginsburg owns what may be the largest private collection of historic car emblems in the nation, having nearly 500 of them.

Ginsburg doesn't know actually how valuable his collection is. He said, "I have one hood ornament from a Pierce Arrow that I've been offered several hundred dollars for. But I'm not interested in selling. My son, Scott, loves my collection almost as much as I do and it's going to be a legacy to him."

Although he owns classic emblems, he does not indulge in collecting classic cars. He beams, "I love to help friends restore classic cars. If people today realized that the cars they are driving could be valuable classics some day, they'd probably take better care of them."

Ginsburg's eye for posterity was demonstrated vividly when he heard the car his son purchased last year will be a discontinued model.

"Let me take the emblem off it now?" father Ginsburg asked son Scott.

Ginsburg is interested in adding to his collection. Anyone having an old car emblem can contact Harry Ginsburg, Advanced Auto Parts, 214 W. Grand River Avenue, Howell, Michigan 48843.

Break in tires

Tires need a break-in period when new. Keep well within the speed limit to help tires "adjust" to other tires on the car so they can function as an integral unit.

Filters play important role

Popular tourist attractions in places like London, Ottawa or Washington are the famous changing of the Guard ceremonies. While not nearly as colorful as the rituals at Buckingham Palace, Parliament Hill or the Tomb of the Unknowns, there is a guard changing ceremony that's important to a motor vehicle.

The automotive guards are the filters that protect a car's engine from potentially serious harm. The air, oil and gasoline filters help screen out foreign materials from vital engine parts.

The air filter prevents dirt from entering the carburetor where the air and fuel is mixed. When clogged, the filter can cease functioning, resulting in poor engine performance and, often, a drastic loss of fuel economy. Most cars today use disposable filters which should be replaced at 10,000 miles as part of an engine tune-up.

The oil filter catches foreign objects in the oil, keeping them from damaging engine parts. A clogged filter cannot perform this function efficiently. Especially in these times of the recommended lengthened time of oil change, a new oil filter should be installed with every change of lubricants.

Put on rear

When radial tires are used with bias or belted tires, place the radials on the rear axle.

Kit comes along with dishwasher

The full-featured built-in dishwasher can be a welcome addition to the kitchen being remodeled ... and a kit with complete parts and instructions can help to simplify the job for the home handyman.

The kit offered the do-it-yourselfer by Hotpoint, for example, contains all the parts needed for a typical installation of one of its undercounter models. It includes such items as drain hose, clamps, copper water line, elbows, unions, and electrical connectors. And it even has detailed directions, diagrams and illustrations with particular attention to safety and proper procedures.

Popular among built-in dishwashers is a unit called the "Dish-Potwasher," so designated because among its 11-cycles is a dish and pot washer cycle for heavily soiled pots, pans, and casseroles.

It is heavily sound-insulated and comes either with tempered black glass front panels or with reversible color door panels to match kitchen decor. The black glass panels also are available as a kit to add to the versatility and eye-appeal of this appliance.

An energy-saving feature is a "wash-natural dry" cycle and an energy- and water-saving short wash cycle for lightly soiled loads. Moreover, the high-efficiency wash system useds less than 16 gallons of hot water during the complete wash-rinse cycles.

Screens handy for the house

If your decorating problem is cracked walls or flaky plaster, a versatile screen could be your easiest solution. Highly decorative, as well as practical, they can be used in a variety of ways, advises an interior designer.

In a dining-room, for example, a combination of both screens and panels covered in fabric impart a charming Oriental atmosphere, while hiding the irregularities so often found in the walls of old homes and apartment buildings.

If your dining-room furniture is one of the new fashionable color finishes, such as the Ming yellow of the furniture in the accompanying photograph, the fabric should be selected to compliment its delicate coloring. A bold Chinese pattern of blue dragons on a red background dramatizes the subtle hue of these servers and chairs.

Wood screen frames, over which to tack the fabric, can be purchased in standard sizes from one of the large department store chains. The panels can be made with canvas stretchers available from an art store in varying sizes to cover any wall flaw.

Plug the hole in your tank

Our tests have shown that, on the average, a car driven over ten thousand miles without a tune-up wastes 1 to 2 gallons in every tankful.

It takes an untuned car 7½ car lengths more to pass another vehicle at 50mph. And an untuned car spews more harmful pollutants into the air we breathe, and has twice as many "won't starts", as a tuned car.

So please get a tune-up every ten thousand miles. And remember, no matter what kind of car you happen to drive ... we've got your plug.

From DeDe Benson

Advice to women drivers

Dear DeDe:

As I write this letter, I am heartsick. I just returned from visiting a neighbor's son in the hospital where he has been for two months. He's 19 years old, a talented athlete and now the doctors say it will be a miracle if he ever walks again. It seems Bob was involved in an accident. After seeing the car he was driving, it's no wonder. The wheels wobbled. One headlight was completely missing. The front end sagged like an old horse. Can't something be done about getting death traps like that off the highway? It may be too late to help Bob but what about other kids?

Mrs. LMB
Silver Springs, Md.

Dear Mrs. LMB:

Unfortunately for Bob, you live in a state that has no Periodic Motor Vehicle Inspection. Maryland is one of 19 states that have no compulsory check on the safety of their cars. Therefore, except for spot checks by the state police, you have no protection against "accidents waiting to happen" like your luckless neighbor's car. If you feel strongly that a PMVI law is needed, then write your state representative in Annapolis. Residents of other states should write their legislators, too, in Alabama, Alaska, Arizona, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, North Dakota, Ohio, Oregon, Tennessee, Washington, Wisconsin.

Dear DeDe:

My car hasn't been running right lately and when I took my car in for service, the mechanic told me hot spark plugs would solve the problem. I know he doesn't mean stolen spark plugs but what is he talking about? Was he kidding?

Dubious in Dubuque

Dear Dubious:

I don't think so. Spark plugs are designed in various heat ranges to accommodate the kind of driving the owner does. In your case, you probably do a lot of short-distance, low-speed driving. Your engine may not get properly "warmed" and carbon may be accumulating on your plugs, hampering their efficiency. So a plug with a "hotter" heat range to burn off carbon sounds like a proper prescription. I'll bet that's what your mechanic really meant. Ask him.

Dear DeDe:

How come you, a woman, know so much about cars?

GT Kingston, Ont.

Dear GT:

My first car was seven years old when I bought it. If something can go wrong with a car, it went wrong with that one. I guess I'm just the type to make lemonade when I'm handed a lemon.

Spotless car interior not that hard to find

Staining the car's interior fabric, especially for the first time, can be a trying experience. Usually the owner has been proudly keeping the outside clean and bright, but he or she has very little knowledge about how to remove a smudge of chocolate or shoe polish from the seat fabrics.

Whether or not the stain is difficult to remove depends mainly upon the type of stain and the fabric. Most automobile seat and door panel upholstery use three types, according to Fisher Body Division of General Motors.

1. Vinyl coated fabrics. 2.Genuine leather. 3.Synthetic cloth fibers (nylon or rayon).

Vinyl and leather are relatively easy to clean. In fact, there is but one recommended method of removing stains from these two types of fabrics.

Use lukewarm water and only the suds from neutral soap worked into a piece of gauze or cheesecloth. This treatment should work on most stains.

Cleaning nylon or rayon cloth fibers is more of a challenge.

For best results, stains should be removed as soon as possible after they have been made. The longer they set, the more difficult the job becomes. Experts warn that treatment of some stains, especially where water treatment is specified, may cause discoloration or disturbance of the finish. These negative results, however, may be considered preferable to the stain itself.

Before discussing what can be done for stains, one should first learn what NOT to do when cleaning fabric. Here are four points to remember:

1)Never use gasoline or naphtha.

2)Do not use solvents such as acetone, lacquer thinners, enamel reducers or nail polish remover.

3)Do not use laundry soaps, bleaches or reducing agents. They weaken fabric and change its color.

4)Do not use too much cleaning fluid because an excessive amount may destroy rubber padding or leave a solvent ring.

There are two ways of cleaning general soilage from cloth fabrics. One is with a cleaning fluid and the other iss with detergent foam cleaners.

Cleaning fluid, which can usually be obtained through an automobile dealer or reputable automotive supply house, should be used to clean stains containing grease, oil or fats. Here's how to use it:

1)Vacuum area to remove loose dirt.

2)Always clean at least a full panel or section of trim by masking off adjacent trim along stitch or weld lines.

4)Use foam only on a clean sponge or soft bristle brush. Do not wet fabric excessively or rub harshly with a brush.

5)Wipe clean with a slightly damp absorbent towel or cloth.

6) Immediately dry fabric with a dry towel or hair dryer.

7)Rewipe fabric with dry absorbent towel or cloth to restore the luster of the trim and to eliminate any dried residue.

Good housekeeping inside the family car can mean extra dollars at trade-in time, so it should be worth your effort to keep it tidy and spotless.

Installation can be easy...

For the homeowner considering remodeling the kitchen or replacing out-of-date built-in appliances, saving the price of installation may be the difference between doing the remodeling all at one time or spreading it out.

Self-installation by the home handyman may even save enough to permit addition of a new appliance, such as a trash compactor.

Some companies offer the do-it-yourselfer a trio of after-dinner appliances that are "easy-installed." Known collectively as the "clean-up center," they are the dishwasher, food waste disposer and trash compactor.

An installation module for simplified electrical and plumbing connection is featured on the new Pot-scrubber II dishwasher. The installation module is connected to the electrical and plumbing systems before the dishwasher is pushed into position under the counter. The module allows the handyman clear access for easy snap-on connection of the dishwasher plumbing and electrical wiring.

Also offered is a do-it-yourself dishwasher replacement kit that can be utilized to replace most dishwashers with their new built-in model.

The sound-shielded disposer is designed for fast do-it-yourself installation. It features a simplified clip mounting system. After the slip mounting head is secured to the mouth of the sink, the disposer simply slips into the mounting head, snaps in place and locks into position. Then only the plumbing and electrical connections remain to be reconnected.

Completing the "clean-up center," is a new household trash compactor which can be built-in or used free-standing. Easiest of the trio to install, the compactor is only 15-inches wide and so can be slid in place of a standard 15-inch base cabinet; or you can replace a 30-inch base cabinet with a trash compactor and a new 15-inch cabinet. Once in place, it requires only a standard 115-volt outlet and simple screw leg height adjustment.

The new compactor has a cylindrical door-mounted bucket that swings out for easy loading at a touch and generates 3,100 pounds of compaction force to pack a week's trash for an average family of four into one neat bag.

With these ease-of-installation features, installing new "after-dinner" appliances is no longer a matter of "how to," but only "when-to."

We need not power or splendor; wide hall or lordly dome; the good, the true, the tender, these form the wealth of home.

A few hints for choosing the right tire for your car

If choosing the right tires for your car gives you as much anguish as the kid with a nickel in a candy store, then here are some basics to help you. With the profusion of design types and materials, confusion is understandable.

According to the Rubber Manufacturers Association (RMA) there are three different tire constructions prevalent today.

Bias tires may have two, four or more body plies or rayon, nylon polyester or other materials. Basic fibers cross at an angle of about 35 degrees with the center line of the tire strengthening both sidewall and tread. Alternate plies extend in opposite directions.

In normal, light duty driving, bias tires should be sufficient.

Belted bias tires (Heavy Duty Tires) have a body similar to that of bias tires, plus two more belts under the tread. This construction strengthens the sidewall and gives greater stability to the tread. Tread life is lengthened since the belts reduce tread motion on the road. Glass belting is often used in belted bias tires helping resist flex and running cooler.

Radial tires have body cords extending from bead to bead. Cords run at an angle of about 90 degrees "radial" to the tire circumferential center line. Two or more layers of relatively rigid belts are found under the tread.

This construction gives greater strength to the tread area and flexibility of the sidewall. The belts restrict tread motion during contact with the road. Tread life, traction and gasoline mileage are improved with radial tires, particularly the steel belted variety.

If you are putting two new tires on your car, mount them on the rear wheels. This will provide better traction, handling and blowout protection. If you're putting a single new tire on, pair it with the best remaining one on the rear axle.

How would you like to save yourself nearly $110?

If your car is one of those described by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and other sources as wasting as much as 25 per cent of its gasoline supply, then such savings are possible.

Simple mathematics tell the story.

Say your car travels 15,000 miles a year and is capable of getting 15 miles per gallon.

If you are paying 60 cents a gallon for fuel, your annual expenditure would be $600.

Should you be losing 25 per cent in gas wasted, then you are out $150.

According to that same EPA report, keeping an automobile tuned up can improve fuel economy. And a recent Champion Spark Plug Company survey shows the average cost of a tune-up today is around $42.

So a tune-up every 10,000 miles plus necessary minor adjustments along the way can save you a nice hunk of change.

Even if your car saves the U.S. and Canadian average of 8.2 per cent after a needed tune-up, you'll still save more in fuel costs than the price of the work. Gas savings under the circumstances described above would be just below $50 per year.

According to David L. Walker, Champion's director of automotive technical services, gasoline savings are only part of the value of a good engine tune-up.

Mr. Walker said, "In every test we've ever conducted, we've found a tuned car has better foul-weather starting success than a car in need of a tune-up. In fact, untuned cars have twice as many 'won't starts' than tuned cars."

A road service call for a start in a remote location where a tow is needed may cost about half the price of a tune-up, he noted.

Tune-up benefits that may not result in cash savings still make driving safer and more pleasureable.

In tests conducted by Champion, emission levels were sharply reduced after tune-up. Average carbon monoxide (CO) emissions were reduced 50 per cent (at idle) and hydrocarbon (HC) emissions were 47 per cent lower (also at idle) after tune-up.

Performance is also improved after tune-up, Mr. Walker noted. In mobile dynamometer tests conducted by Champion, there was an 8.6 per cent increase in power and an 8.0 per cent decrease in passing distance after tune-up.

Car efficiency could help U.S.

"The American economy now consumes about 17 million barrels of oil each day. Our inability to meet this demand from domestic supplies has forced us into increasing dependence on the oil-rich Middle Est and other foreign suppliers."

So says a statement from the U.S. Department of Transportation, specially prepared for this supplement to present the government's point of view on the gasoline crunch.

Transportation accounts for nearly 60 per cent of all the liquid fuel consumed in the United States and the more than 102 million automobiles registered throughout the nation account for approximately half of transportation's total use.

Obviously, increasing the fuel efficiency of our cars will go a long way toward decreasing our demand for petroleum and easing the inflationary pressure created by that demand.

President Ford has established the goal of increasing the fuel efficiency of the 1980 model cars by 40 per cent over 1974 models. Our research indicates that the President's goal is entirely reasonable and that the goal can be reached by the manufacturers through improved technology, engine resizing and a relatively limited marketing shift to smaller cars. Indeed, the average fuel economy of 1975 model automobiles has already brought about a 13.5 per cent improvement over 1974 models — a major step toward the President's goal.

But President Ford has emphasized the urgency of whipping inflation now. To bank on the long range solutions of increasing domestic energy supplies and improving automobile fuel efficiency is like praying for rain while flames lick through the roof of the house.

President Ford struck at the heart of the matter when delivering his address on the economy last October he asked all of us to reduce our driving by 5 per cent in the effort to both curb inflation and to ease the energy demand.

Actually, the President's request was a modest one. Our studies indicate the average car owner could reduce his driving by 10 per cent without seriously affecting his job or living standard.

If that average car owner, now driving 13,000 miles a year, would cut his driving by 10 per cent he would save some 100 gallons of fuel annually. And, if the 100 million-plus cars on the road each achieved similar reductions, the savings would exceed 10 billion gallons of gasoline a year with the very significant savings in fuel cost of $5 billion.

The plain truth is that most of us too casually and too wastefully use our automobiles at needless cost to ourselves and to the disadvantage of our society. Many trips are made for purposes of durbious value. And the number of worthwhile trips could be greatly reduced by better planning and organizing our daily routines.

Although the typical car seats four persons, its urban work trip occupancy averages only 1.4 persons. This statistic tops all others in supporting the charge of waste and inefficiency in the national transportation system. Raising the occupancy rate nationwide to an average or even two persons per automobile would save an extraordinary five billion gallons of gasoline a year.

We at the Department of Transportation have placed top priority on encouraging greater nationwide participation in carpooling. Our theme: "Double Up America — Two Can Ride Cheaper Than One."

The reduction in the use of fuel that a concerted national carpooling effort could bring about would significantly ease a major inflationary pressure on the economy. Additional goals that carpooling can help achieve are reduction of urban air pollution and an easing of traffic congestion on the streets and highways in and around our cities.

How we drive should rank with where and when we drive in any consideration of the ways a driver can save fuel. Just how much can be saved by avoiding excessive speed will vary from car to car, but tests indicate that a 25 per cent improvement in fuel economy is a reasonable expectation when highway driving is reduced from 70 to 50 miles per hour.

Another way to conserve gasoline is to make sure all vehicless are properly maintained. For example, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reports "keeping an automobile tuned up can, on the average, improve fuel economy six per cent as compared to an untuned auto." The agency added grossly maladjusted and undermaintained vehicles can waste 20 per cent or more fuel.

An estimated 3.8 billion gallons of fuel could be saved annually through proper engine maintenance.

Whisky cook's helper

Anyone can turn out a great filet of beef roast. But who can afford it? The lesser cuts can also turn out most delicious but it takes a very good cookpot and, surprisingly, a very good Scotch whisky.

If you're cooking with worn-out pots or inexpensive but too lightweight cookware you are not giving your meat a chance. A tougher cut of meat (often the most flavorful, however) needs long, slow cooking. You should have a heavy casserole or Dutch oven, preferably enamel over cast iron, or a very heavy-bottomed aluminum pot. These spread heat evenly and retain it evenly; the roast can cook slowly without burning or drying out, absorbing all the good juices and flavors of your seasonings.

You can also tenderize the roast beforehand with a marinade of Scotch whisky which softens the tissues and adds a marvelous new and tasty flavor. A good imported blend of Scotch works wonders with texture and flavor — and of course is tops for an on-the-rocks drink before dinner, too.

Take a 3½-pound tied and boneless rump or chuck roast, place in deep bowl which fits snugly as possible, add 1¼ cups 90-proof Scotch and enough water or beef stock to cover meat halfway. Marinate 24 hours in least cold part of refrigerator, turning occasionally.

Reserving marinade, dry meat with paper towels, add salt and pepper, then dredge meat lightly in flour.

Cover tightly, simmer slowly for two and half hours or more until roast is quite tender. Baste top of roast once or twice. Remove meat, cool slightly and slice. Strain gravy, thicken with a little flour.

Gasoline vapor is a deadly killer, but few people recognize its danger when they use it for cleaning purposes.

"Never use gasoline as a cleaning fluid," advises the American Petroleum Institute's Safety and Fire Protection Committee. "Use only an approved, high flash point cleaning solvent."

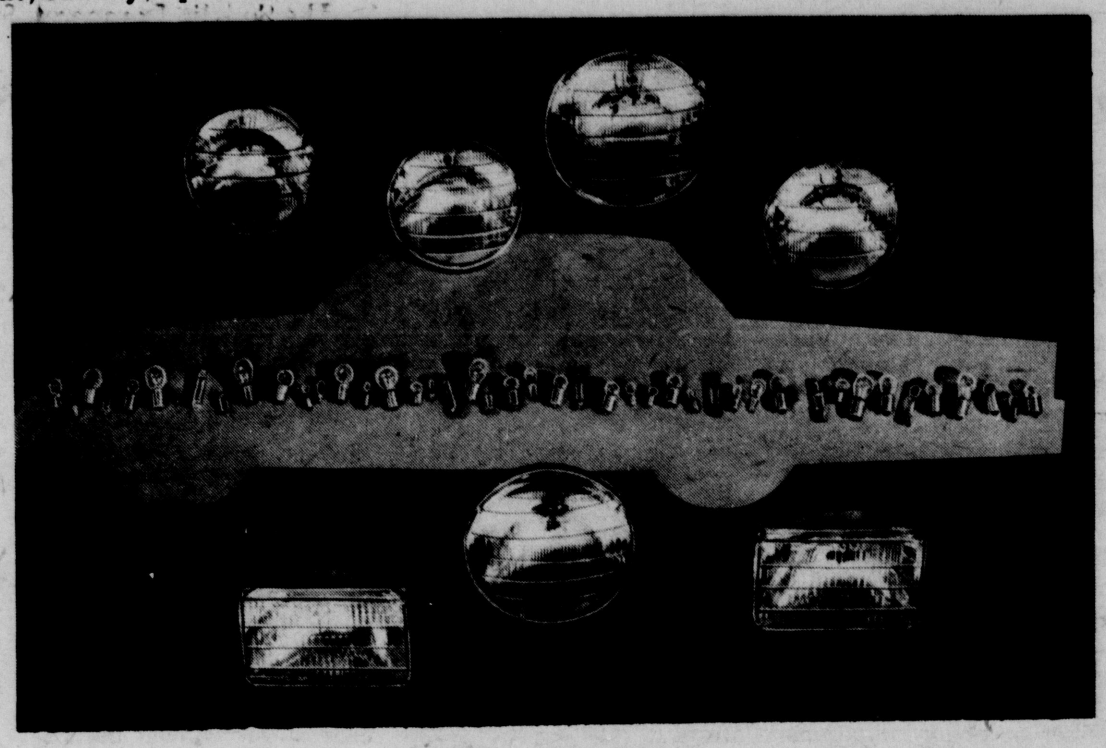
Gasoline vaporizes rapidly when exposed and the vapor settles invisibly near the floor because the fumes are heavier than air. Gasoline vapors have been known to travel many feet to an ignition source resulting in a "flash back" to the liquid. An explosion can be caused by the slightest source of ignition, such as a pilot light, an arc from an electric motor or power tool, the flick of a wall switch, or a lighted match.

A high flash point solvent such as kerosene can be used for cleaning automobile parts or tools. For oil and grease spills, a cleaning compound or sawdust can be used to remove the bulk of the substance and, if necessary, a steam cleaner or detergent may be used for additional cleaning. A waterless hand cleaner may be used to clean hands and arms.

Remember, it takes three elements for combustion — air, fuel, and an ignition source. Keep them apart. Don't Use Gasoline As A Cleaner!

Stint yourself, as you think good, in other things; but don't scruple freedom in brightening home. Gay furniture and brilliant garden are a sight day by day, and make life blither.

— Buxton



Lights, lights ...

Checking condition of the lights is basic to safe driving and according to General Electric, there are 42 kinds of illumination sources in typical cars of today. They range from the basics like head and tail lights to highly specialized lamps indicating improperly operating pollution controls. GE reports those 42 car lights are 17 more than found in the home.

Could be critical

Critical steering components often are overlooked by car owners. Once trouble is sensed in this system, then it may be too late to avoid expensive repairs. Regular lubrication and inspection of the steering by your service man can prevent problems before they start.

Some warning signals sometimes are too late

When the red light or gauge on your dashboard warns of low oil pressure, there's generally time to do something about it. But when you get warnings of something amiss in your steering system, it could be a sign that potentially dangerous and expensive repair damage has already been done.

That's one reason it pays to have your favorite car service man check the front end at every opportunity. And that's why one should keep components in proper alignment, state of lubrication and adjustment.

To help you recognize the signs your car will give you when steering components are out of whack, below is a list of symptoms that can result from maulfunctioning front end parts.

A change is smart any time

If you feel installing new antifreeze in the spring is like celebrating Christmas in July, then the new facts of motoring life haven't been made clear to you. When last winter's short supplies of antifreeze hit the car-owning public, a number of car owners either did without a fresh change or paid premium prices.

What these motorists may not have realized is there is no urgency to change antifreeze in late fall or early winter. It makes sense to change it any time a change is needed — in July as well as January.

Actually, car experts say, antifreeze is a misnomer. Coolant antifreeze is a more accurate description of the product. It is designed to both protect against the rigors of sub-zero weather and the plus 250 degree F operation of a modern, high compression engine in summer.

So installing a fresh cooling system protection may be smarter at time when the car's air conditioning is going full blast and warm air temperatures are making engines run hotter.

Most cars are purchased new in warm weather months. Therefore, if one heeds recommendations of annual changes of coolant antifreeze, then the change should come in these same warm weather time periods.

Historic patterns of late fall antifreeze changes date back to times when alcohol or methanol were used as bases of the product. These boiled away when warm weather came so it was important to put in new supplies when weather got cold again. Today's coolant base is ethylene glycol that can withstand both cold and hot temperatures.

Installing new coolant antifreeze at this time of year may save you money and long waits for the product next fall when most motorists start to worry about the need for change.

Consider family's needs

Planning a laundry area around your family's needs is a key to efficient home remodeling.

Start with a list of major chores for which you use your present laundry area. Then, if space permits, add areas for other activities you would like to include.

Next, take an objective look at your family's life-style and consider your own work habits and preferences. Note those things that please or annoy in your present arrangement, then try to imagine how things could be arranged more conveniently.

Sears laundry experts point out that a lundry area should include space for sorting and folding, shelves for storing laundry aids, a place to hang Perma Prest garments and, most important, a washer and dryer. To this basic list can be added storage for soiled clothes, a sink, ironing board, even a sewing machine.

Check the dimensions and details of your laundry area before you start. If you plan to remodel an existing room to include a laundry center, make a sketch of the room and its dimensions on graph paper, noting windows, doors, casings and trim, door swings and radiators or vents. Indicate the location of light switches, electrical outlets, exhaust fans and plumbing.

If new appliances are part of your plans, learn as much as you can before you buy. Since the life of laundry appliances is usually 10 to 15 years, look for equipment that will meet your family's future needs and launder the fabrics of tomorrow as effectively as it does those of today.

In fact, you can have a Kenmore pair in 48 inches or even 24½ inches of floor space! (To accomplish the latter, you stack a compact dryer on a rack over a compact washer.)

Your laundry area should be a happy place, pretty and efficient, that makes you feel you can accomplish miracles.

'Get-away car' has different use now

The term "getaway car" brings to mind Grade B gangster movies. The jittery driver, invariably protrayed by actors like Ed Brophy or Elisha Cook, Jr., fidgeted waiting for Jack LaRue to finish the heist.

While this kind of movie may have gone the way of free dish night and dime popcorn, the getaway car is still with us.

Now it is the family automobile that serves as a Cinderella's coach. It gets us away from the worry and humdrum of workaday life and takes us to adventurous places away from home.

Some 85 per cent of us do our vacation and leisure-time travel strictly by car. Whether the trip is a coast-to-coast wander or a picnic at a nearby campground, the automobile provides the way to get there.

Certainly today there are problems we want to get away from. Thanks to our national treasure of getaway cars, most of us can escape from cares for a few days or a few hours.

Especially in times when every dollar should be spent wisely, it is true that the automobile is still our most econnomical way to travel.

Higher gasoline prices notwithstanding, there is no cheaper way (save walking) than the car to take the family on a holiday trip.

For many car owners the aim this year will be making the trip as economical as possible.

As inconsistent as it may sound, the best way to save money on your forthcoming trip is to spend it now. Invest in some basic car maintenance and the savings may be substantial.

With gasoline prices at heights unimaginable only two years ago, an engine that wastes fuel due to lack of tune-up is a luxury no one can afford.

Due to high gasoline prices it is accurate to say that the tune-up could pay for itself several times over.

Or consider items like shock absorbers, wheel alignment and other components that affect tire life.

An expensive set of tires can wear out an estimated 25 per cent before its time due to misalignment, worn shocks or just plain inattention to recommended tire pressure.

Something as simple as adhering to scheduled oil and filter changes, lubrication can save money in costly engine or chassis wear.

Even if one disregards the safety and riding pleasure a cared for car provides, the economies of the proverbial ounce of prevention-pound of cure formula still exist.

So make that "getaway from cares" car trip truly carefree. Don't add expensive bills or potential car troubles to your list of woes.

Visit a competent service outlet before you leave and be sure your vehicle is cared for and not another unwelcome care.

Some are lucky

Unless you are one of the lucky ones who live within walking distance of a wooded campground, there is no other way to reach a site like this than by car. The special tang of a meal cooked outdoors is only one of the pleasures made possible by car ownership. And a well-maintained car can make any summer vacation trip truly carefree and can actually save money through improved gas mileage.

An example

Despite having been generally neglected, "Calamity Jane" had been cruising Port Hurton Streets. The Car Care Council used it to show folks how maintenance can mean the difference between safe driving and trafffic accidents. Here driver training students crowd around to get the detailed message close-vp.

'Calamity' car is just that

Late last summer, a young Port Huron, Mich. woman hit it lucky twice. Her first bit of fortune was finding a buyer for the 1966 model car she was selling.

Her second stroke of luck was being alive.

An official of the Car Care Council (CCC) happened to be looking for a car just like the one Susie Smith (not her real name) was driving. The CCC was seeking out a vehicle currently being driven, yet in such poor condition that it was a menace to the driver and other people on the road.

Among the dangerous conditions plaguing the car were defective brakes, bald tires, misaligned wheels, bad shocks, faulty steering — any one of which could have helped cause a fatal accident.

The car's exhaust system was rotted away, a condition made even more hazardous by the fact that body and undercarriage rust provided a tailor-made conduit for lethal carbon monoxide fumes.

The water pump was loose and leaking, headlights misaligned and the ignition system so badly neglected that starting the car was a major task.

A CCC spokesman remarked, "Jane was emitting so much pollution that the analyzing device couldn't even record the amount. Emissions knocked the needle clear off the dial."

The Council used Calamity Jane, with roof painted a luminous red for DANGER, as a center piece for Car Care Week in Port Huron. The car was towed (not driven) to various locations to show students and other groups how neglected a car can be and still be allowed on the highway.

One local observer put it this way, "It makes me shudder to think that a car like that was operating on our streets only a few months ago. And I bet there are a lot more like that one. When the (bleep) are we going to get compulsory vehicle inspection in this state?"

Sparkplug life is perilous

Like the hero of a spy adventure thriller, the spark plug lives a perilous life. Assaulted by a dangerous cast of "villains," such as searing heat, corrosive chemicals, jolting electric current and jack-hammer pounding, the plug makes agent 007's tribulations seem like a slap on the wrist by comparison.

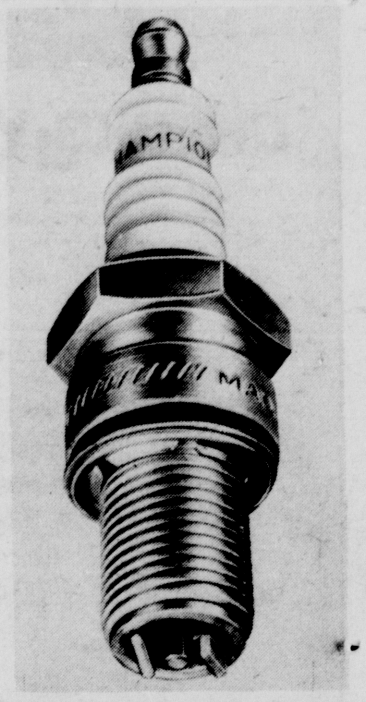
According to Champion Spark Plug Company, the plug itself operates in temperatures anywhere from sub-zero to 1,500 degrees F. or more. Occasional blasts of corrosive combustion gasses reaching heat intensity of more than 4,000 degrees F can assault the plugs.

Pressure impacts of 2,000 pounds per square inch and electrical discharges of 10,000 volts or more also batter spark plugs. In 10,000 miles of driving, the spark plug will fire 15 million times.

After approximately 10,000 miles, the punishment the plug endures takes its toll. Electrode wear, caused by the punishing combination of electrical and chemical assaults, is irreversible. So, the plug can no longer provide economical performance.

That's why automotive experts recommend installation of a new set of plugs after 10,000 miles on most cars.

While the current highway death rate of 4.5 fatalities per 100 million vehicle miles is a grim statistic, it's a vast improvement over the 1930 figure. In that year, the rate was 16.5 deaths per 100 million miles.



Drive belt can tell good story

By JODY CARR

Among the inner circle of the auto parts world, it is said that the unsung hero of all unsung heroes is the fan belt, or drive belt. It drives a lot more than just the fan.

Ask any generator, water pump, power steering pump or fan. These components will vouch for the drive belt, without which they would be looking for another way to go.

However, this is not why the drive belt has earned its reputation as the good guy. It is esteemed, because the last thing it wants to do is let its buddies down. This means it doesn't want to let you down, either.

Still, the best of drive belts can't last forever. When one breaks, your car may overheat, your battery may die, your power steering may give out or your air conditioning may quit.

You may experience a couple of these traumatic situations simultaneously. So your drive belt tries to help you anticipate trouble by providing a unique combination of audible and visual warnings of impending problems.

First, look for visual signs of old age. Twist the belt. Notice that it is V-shaped, fitting into a V-shaped pulley. The sides of the V on the belt are what do the driving. Are they cracked, frayed or glazed?

This may be enough to tell you that Old Faithful wants to retire.

Or the belt may signal you audibly, by screeching when you accelerate the engine in neutral. This may be nothing more than looseness, which can be corrected in a jiffy.

A. "Blinding" oncoming drivers
B. Malfunction of turn signals
C. Eventual draining of battery current.

A. Reduced visibility in foul weather
B. Malfunction of washer system
C. Interference with FM radio signal

5. Low level of engine oil is often a sign of:

A. Need for chassis lube

A. Can prove dangerous when traveling at high speeds on a sharp curve
B. Cause wheels to leave ground during a panic stop
C. Drain the battery current

10. Emission checks finding high levels of pollutants may indicate:

A. Worn spark plugs
B. Use of wrong weight motor oil
C. Clogged air cleaner

ANSWERS: 1: C. 2: A. 3: C. 4: A. 5: C. 6: A and C. 7: B. 8: C. 9: A and B. 10: A and C.

Tire inflation should be watched

You may want to invest in a pressure gauge to keep frequent tabs on your tires. Proper pressure for tires is generally given in a location inside the driver's compartment of the car — sometimes on a glove box door or inside the door post. Keeping tires properly inflated saves on tire wear, gas consumption and provides safer going.

Safety belts prove they save lives

Hospitals in Australia are reporting a drop of 24 per cent in bed occupancy since the introduction of mandatory seat belt wearing legislation.

In Victoria the belt wearing law has been in two years, an they have experienced a 20.8 per cent reduction in road deaths. In the rest of Australia the seat belt law is just one year old, and there has already been a 17.2 per cent reduction in automobile deaths throughout the country. Serious injuries, they stated, have been reduced by about 50 per cent.

Cleaner air

New Jersey's mandatory emissions inspection program is expected to reduce carbon monoxide emissions by more than 20 per cent in its first year of operation.

AUTO FACTS

Time to consider new shocks

Standard operating procedure in many homes at this time of the year is installation of screens in windows and doors. It is the time to check hardware, tighten a few screws here and there and add a drop of oil where necessary.

You may find an adjustment needed in the door closer, too. A combination of wear on the plunger and the lighter screen insert makes the door close differently.

This plunger is not unlike the shock absorbers on your car, which may be showing signs of wear after the rigors of winter. Shock absorbers are, essentially, plungers.

As the plunger on your screen door is designed to resist the forces of the closer spring, allowing the door to close gently, so the shock absorber resists the tendency of the wheel on your car to hop as it bounces off an obstruction in the road.

Shocks also keep the car's body from bobbing up and down like a rowboat at sea. The shock absorber's philosophy is to maintain the status quo; the wheels shouldn't hop and the body shouldn't bop.

Eventually, with age, a worn shock absorber loses its control of the situation. Instead of easing your wheels over bimps in the road, it lets them bounce, sometimes setting up an oscillation like a ball on a long rubber band.

If this only caused an uncomfortable ride, it would be bad enough. But there are other problems created by worn shocks. Most important is the safety factor.

When the wheel is bouncing a few inches in the air, it cannot contribute much to the steering and-or braking of your car. During this short but critical period you are virtually out of control.

Tires and suspension parts also take additional punishment when shocks lose their control. If a worn shock absorber permits these parts to suffer two or three rebounds after a bump, they will have taken double or triple punishment. You'll feel this in your repair bills sooner or later.

As a rule of thumb, any time after your shocks are two years old, they may be due for replacement. New ones will give your car a whole new lease on life.

Think about it the next time you are driving over a bimpy road. Or better yet, before you do.

Avoid high speed

How to get away from sinking car

If you are ever unlucky enough to be in a car that enters deep water, the Canada Safety Council offers some advice.

A car floats for a short time after hitting the water in a near horizontal position irrespective of how it hit the water. The time varies with make from a few seconds to three or four minutes, after which it sinks vertically, engine end first.

Rules for escape are:

1) Immediately after hitting the water, release your safety belt.

2) Open door windows, movable roof (if any), and-or back window. Leave the car via the best route as quickly as possible. During the floating period, it will be difficult to open the doors because of water pressure from the outside.

3) If it is impossible to leave the car while floating, the car doors can usually be opened underwater because outside pressure of water has been equalized.

4) If the car is damaged to the extent that none of these ways of escape can be taken, use the feet or shoulders to remove the front or back window by pushing it out. This can best be done by pushing in the corners.

When a car sinks in water, outside and inside lights should be switched on if possible. This lessens confusion in the vehicle, and makes location from above easier.

Shining examples

A survey in Great Britain reveals that among those who polish their cars regularly, 58 per cent have never had an accident. Only 31 per cent of those who don't polish cars could claim such distinction.

FOR KAY ISELIN GILMAN, author of "Inside the Pressure Cooker: A Year in the Life of the New York Jets"

You got to know what makes Joe Namath tick when you researched the book that put you on his enemy list. Do you think he will get married soon?—Mabel Dolan, Atlantic City, N.J.

Joe

Kay Gilman

Randi

● Joe has told his friends—and I used to be one—that he will never marry while he is playing football because he has strong doubts about his ability to resist the constant temptations that surround him. When and if he does take the plunge, the prime candidate would have to be Randi Oakes, the Iowa-born New York model who has been his steady companion for the last four years.

FOR PRESIDENT GERALD FORD

In view of the acute gasoline shortage, why do you and other high office holders use limousines? Why not an economy car?—Sue Wordell, Brillion, Wis.

● I'm required to use a Secret Service vehicle that is armoured and especially equipped with communications apparatus for my protection. An economy car couldn't accommodate the intricate setup required. About half the vehicles in the White House Motor Pool have been reduced in size in an effort to conserve fuel.

FOR CHARLES SCHULZ, "Peanuts" cartoonist

What grades are Lucy, Linus and Charlie Brown in?—Vicki Cassaday, Lakehurst, N.J.

● I don't know for sure what grades they are in, but I think Sally is in kindergarten.

FOR LESLIE UGGAMS

Is your husband involved with your career, and how does he feel about Women's Lib?—E.B., Green Bay, Wis.

● Grahame is my manager, and he runs his own business. (Which has nothing to do with show business.) Last year he rented a billboard on Los Angeles' Sunset Strip, with a message for me that read, "Love from Grahame. See you soon at the Thunderbird in Las Vegas." As for Women's Lib, he sees nothing wrong with a woman wanting to get out of the kitchen—as long as her name isn't Sara Lee!

FOR ARLENE FRANCIS

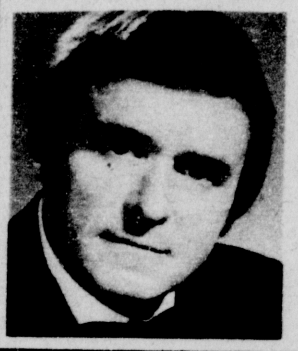
My compliments on staying so young and slim. What's your secret?—Mrs. G. Kopf, Spartanburg, S.C.

● The "beauty" part I attribute to lots of soap and water. As to the slim bit, I've never been a big eater. But if I do gain a couple of pounds after a binge (I can't resist strawberry shortcake), I take it right off. I've been exercising since my late 20's so it's now an automatic thing. I even do some exercises in elevators, such as standing on my toes with tight knees, keeping my back flat against the wall.

FOR WILLIE MAYS

If you had your life to live over again, would you have done anything differently? And what is the greatest thing that ever happened to you?—A. Kravitz, New York, N.Y.

● 1) I would try to get a college education. 2) There are two "greatest" things—being able to play baseball for so long and marrying my wife Mae.



FOR MIKE DOUGLAS

How do you maintain such interest, never getting bored, listening to your various guests day after day?—F. Carold, Flint, Mich.

● It's a combination of self-discipline and a love of all people. It's a natural with me. I don't create anything other than myself on the tube—I'm the same guy when I'm off it. As for boredom, the day I get bored—that's the day I'll give it all up.

FOR SYLVIA PORTER, financial columnist

What do you think is in store for the U.S. economy this year?—Sylvia Strickland, Fayetteville, N.C.

● This will be a grim year in my opinion, but, barring a worldwide catastrophe, I believe it will end on a much brighter note than it began.

FOR JACQUES COUSTEAU

Do you believe in the Loch Ness monster?—N. Somes, Casper, Wyo.

● No, I don't think it exists. But the legend persists, and will continue to do so, because one human being out of every four is a mythomaniac.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

I've heard strange stories about Linda Blair. Any idea what she's really like?—Rick Jeffers, Ogden, Utah

● Since her fame stemmed from "The Exorcist," we checked with Jason Miller (the Pulitzer-prizewinning playwright who was the priest in the movie). He said: "She was placed in such a high and precarious situation, with so much pressure, that I marveled how she withstood it. She was only 13 then, and a great little actress. She's now at the point where she must protect herself, because that kind of success can be mishandled or go to her head. When I won the Pulitzer Prize for 'That Championship Season,' she gave me a gift. She's an extremely sweet kid who's been placed in a very difficult position. If, as you say, she acts 'strangely,' it's a safeguard. Incidentally, she's a fine horsewoman—I know because I've seen her ride."

Power Behind the President:

Did Anyone Really Know Bess Truman?

A look backward on the occasion of her recent 90th birthday

By Lillian Rogers Parks

As told to Frances Spatz Leighton

President Truman, daughter Margaret and wife Bess were known as "The Three Musketeers" to the White House staff.

What was it like to work at the White House with a secretive First Lady, a cussing President and their theatrically ambitious daughter? Warm and friendly. I remember it well. "The Three Musketeers," we called them. And of the three, perhaps the one I remember best is the one the world knew least—the President's wife, Bess.

The mystery woman of the age is not Jackie Kennedy Onassis or any other glamorous female who flits in and out of the headlines. She is Bess Truman, acknowledged by all to be the least-known First Lady of modern times. People who know I worked for her at the White House as maid and seamstress, as well as for other First Ladies from Lou Hoover to Mamie Doud Eisenhower, have suddenly looked me up in my retirement to ask, "Why didn't her daughter Margaret say more about her mother in her book on Harry Truman? Was she jealous of her mother?" And others ask why Harry Truman, in the taped interviews he made with Merle Miller, which became a best seller, also seemed to avoid talking about his wife. "Was it a conspiracy of silence?" they ask.

The answer is yes. Mrs. T., as we called her, would have cringed and scolded her daughter or husband if they had "gone on" about her, as she would call it. For of all the First Ladies and famous women I have seen, Bess Truman was the shiest.

When I say that Bess was shy, most people would think of someone who simply shuns the limelight. But Bess shunned it so much that she would actually hide behind doorways and bushes so that the press and other visitors would see only Harry Truman. Some of the time he let her get away with it. But if he felt she should be in a picture he would send someone to fetch her and she would come forward reluctantly. She was so shy that her palms would sweat when she was faced with a receiving line. But of all the First Ladies I knew, Bess was the best.

"Once Margaret wanted a certain fur cape. 'I thought I'd put it on your account,' she said. Bess shot back, 'Indeed you will not. You will pay for it yourself.'"

I remember so many things about Bess as First Lady. At first I got off on the wrong foot with her when she thought I was holding back the best towels and giving her frayed and mended ones. I learned that fresh soap and perfect towels had a special significance for her. When she had company, I had to put in a new bar of soap every time a guest washed her hands. And all towels had to be new looking. That was her small idiosyncrasy—or, as the younger generation would say, her hang-up.

In everything else I could see, Mrs. T. was very economical. Once she scolded me about the big laundry bill. I said, "Mrs. Truman, it's because of all the pool towels used by the swimmers." Mrs. Truman said, "Oh?"—and immediately sent notice that the President was to have a separate towel for the pool and the White House staff who used the pool were to bring their own. "I don't like to waste either the government's money or my own, Lillian," she said.

Even though Bess was First Lady, she still had family problems. The general public did not realize that the First Lady's mother, Mrs. Wallace, lived with the Trumans at the White House. Bess loved her mother very much, but Mrs. Wallace seemed to treat her son-in-law as some young upstart, no matter how he tried to woo her. When Bess was visiting Margaret in New York, the President would stop by his mother-in-law's room at the White House to see how she was. She did not exactly welcome his visits. Once when I was sitting with her he stopped in and said, "Are they treating you well, Mrs. Wallace?" Mrs. Wallace leaned over as if to pick up something and pretended she didn't hear. She was not going to be egged into saying something nice by that man.

I mentioned it later to Mr. Prettyman, the President's valet, and he explained it this way: "Mrs. Wallace always thought Harry Truman wouldn't amount to anything. It galls her to see him in the White House, ruining her prediction."

John Neubauer

It is my feeling that Mrs. T. had ESP. She was always afraid of household accidents and seemed to have a foreboding that something was going to happen to one of the White House maids. She had an almost pathological fear of ladders—housemen would say, "Don't let Mrs. T. catch you walking under one"—and of rugs. She was always worrying one of us would fall. I was relieved when she left the White House that nothing had done us in as predicted. But years later it finally happened. And it happened to Vietta, Mrs. Truman's personal maid, who had gone back to Independence with the Trumans to work in their home.

Vietta Garr was standing on a kitchen ladder to get a teapot off the shelf above the stove when her dress caught fire. She screamed and fell and was rushed to the hospital. She died of the burns. I was aghast when I heard the news in a letter from Mrs. Truman—it was so ironic, the culmination of her greatest feelings of foreboding.

There were only two times I saw Bess Truman cry. Once was when her mother died. The other was when some Puerto Ricans made their assassination attempt on her husband at Blair House. "I cannot imagine life without him," she said. She loved her husband very much, even though she never showed it in public.

She showed it in private, mostly by teasing him. She would pretend to be reading newspaper articles about him, making up some nasty news or voicing his worst fears, such as that he could not possibly win reelection. She would use a humorous voice that would make the President break out in a big grin.

Once Mrs. Truman insisted that I teach Margaret how to hem a slip, to shorten it. I did, and I think it was the last thing she did along those lines. I remember Bess fretted too about Margaret learning the value of money. Once Margaret wanted a certain fur cape. She had just returned from New York and she casually told her mother about a cape she had seen. "I thought I'd put it on your account," she said.

Bess shot back, "Indeed you will not. You will pay for it yourself. You are working now and you'll just have to LIVE! REALLY LIVE!

In One Of The Healthiest, Sunniest Climates In All America—

On Your Own Ranchette Just $349—Only $5 a Month!

(*See Below)

Do you know people who wake up to sunshine 355 days out of each year . . . people who don't know what it is to be oppressed by humid heat in the summer or by the cold clutch of winter damp? Do you know people to whom the sun is a year 'round commonplace? We know such people. They live in sunny, southwest New Mexico.

And in all of New Mexico itself it would be difficult to match the climate and beauty of the region surrounding Deming. As spectacular as the northern portion, but without the cold of winter. As dry and pure as Arizona, but not as hot in the summer.

To live anywhere in New Mexico is to live well. The superb climate. so brilliantly sunny in the winter—the breathtaking beauty of a lavish nature— the vigor of a young and growing state—these are the reasons why tens of thousands of Americans already have moved to New Mexico.

Consider then: Here in the center of this superb climate and beauty are towns which have grown amazingly in the last few years. For example, Las Cruces, New Mexico, only 60 miles from Deming, had 12,000 people in 1950. By 1970, 37,000 . . . a rise of 300% in 20 years—and still growing. Like Tucson, 213 miles from Deming, and Phoenix, Arizona, 301 miles from Deming, this area has the same desert allure and pure air. Statistics show the same percentage of possible sunshine, summer and winter, as Phoenix and Tucson. Beginning 28 miles from the flavorful city of Deming (population 10,000) are 12,000 acres of former ranches whose farthest boundary is 35 miles from town, with an average approximate distance of 31 miles from Deming.

Spectacularly set off by the breathtaking Florida Mountains, this land is so typical of the romance of the southwest that it has been photographed for the covers of many magazines including the official publication of the State of New Mexico. What better way to describe its Southwestern flavor than to tell you that when the producers of the movie THE TALL TEXAN sought an authentic locale for their picture, they chose the same area that we have sub-divided into SUNSHINE VALLEY RANCHETTES. THE TALL TEXAN was filmed here, the same place where you may have a Ranchette of your very own. In this lovely basin every SUNSHINE VALLEY RANCHETTE fronts on graded dirt roads already dedicated to Luna County in widths of 60 to 100 feet. Every Ranchette has direct access leading to three major highways — U.S. Highways 80, 70 and brand new Interstate 10. Schools, hospitals, houses of worship, shops, movies, golf course, tennis courts are located in the growing city of Deming.

DEMING'S friendliness captivates the fancy of people from every state in the Union. To visit us is like going back to the warmth of one's own family. Here are the practical benefits of living anywhere near Deming.

GOLF—The public golf course is right in Deming itself. It is a beautiful course with the Florida Mountains towering in the background. You play 12 months a year in this delightful climate.

HUNTING AND FISHING—What are you after? Deer, antelope, wild turkey? Or maybe bear, mountain lion? Well, you can get dove, quail and rabbits right in your own backyard, in the Floridas. For really big game, and great fishing, try the Gila National Forest 60 miles directly north. Almost 2,000,000 acres for camping, hunting and fishing. Just 65 miles to the northeast is the Caballo Dam-Elephant Butte Reservoir, one of the largest man-made lakes in the United States, where you can boat, fish, swim or go water skiing.

HORSEBACK RIDING—You'll find the Florida Mountains enthralling. Bring along a pouch and join other rockhounds seeking agate and geodes.

A GROWING AREA—Thousands of people have bought Ranchettes through the mail and on site. The new U.S. Interstate 10 has recently been completed and Deming is the ONLY city in all of New Mexico through which I-10 passes and has interchanges. Consider the new road from Palomas (Old Mexico which is only 35 miles south of Deming) which the Mexican government has just recently completed. This road goes to Casas Grandes where the Paquime ruins, among the largest and most mysterious in all of Old Mexico, are just being discovered by tourists. Many of these tourists will eventually go right through Deming, into Palomas where they will eat at Paquimes famous restaurant, and will then continue on to see these magnificent ruins. Deming is the seat of Luna County, THE THIRD FASTEST GROWING COUNTY IN ALL OF NEW MEXICO.

DON'T BE MISLED BY OUR LOW PRICES—Just as there is need for good family style restaurants as well as the more fancy type of restaurants, so there is need for good honest, unimproved, low-priced property. We find pleasure in the fact that we have scores of letters expressing pleasure at the fine treatment customers receive when coming here to visit their property, and their actual surprise at the real beauty of this area and the unusual friendliness of the local people.

We wish we could keep this up forever, but with all the best intentions in the world we find it impossible tc cope with today's rising costs in all areas and still continue to give what we consider good value and good service. This is the plain truth. We will not offer any more half-acre Ranchettes when our present inventory is sold.

The price of your Ranchette is just $349 for a full half-acre with low monthly payments of $5 including interest at the annual percentage rate of 6%. You may reserve as many Ranchettes as you wish — one, two or more.

Make your reservation now! No deposit necessary! You take no risk. Your reservation does not obligate you. You have the unqualified right to change your mind within 45 days after we send your Purchaser's Agreement, Property Owner's Kit, Maps and Photographs — 15 days to check our references, talk it over with the family. If, during that time, you should change your mind your reservation will be cancelled with absolutely no obligation. Then you have an ADDITIONAL 30 DAYS AFTER you have made your cash down payment to change your mind and request a full refund of every dollar you have paid in. If this makes sense mail the coupon today.

Bess Truman

I can truly say Mrs. Truman at the White House was one of the best friends I ever had. She would always introduce me to her club members and make me feel a part of things. Once I was most embarrassed when she suddenly brought her bridge club into the attic of the White House where I was working. The place was a mess. Later I said, "Why did you do it? I'm so ashamed of how that attic looks." She said, "Lillian—it looked like an attic should look." She added, "They said they wanted to see the real White House, so I decided to show them some White House rooms that didn't look like a museum."

Mrs. Truman left the White House in January, 1953, and returned in May for a ladies luncheon to which Mamie Eisenhower had invited her. Mr. West brought her up to the linen and sewing room on the third floor to see me.

I told her I was going to California to see my brother. She said, "If you don't stop by the house in Independence we're going to be mighty mad." Well, I didn't make it on that trip, but I did make it on another occasion, and I will never forget the look of that house on 219 North Delaware Street in Independence, Mo.

The first thing that shocked me as I entered was a big picture of Eisenhower, who was certainly not Mr. Truman's friend and about whom he had said many harsh things. "Why?" I asked Vietta, pointing at the portrait on the wall. "Why Ike of all people? I thought that they were practically enemies."

"Because he is President," said Vietta. "That's the way Harry Truman feels about history."

As I continued through the house, I realized that this was what Mrs. Truman had been trying to achieve at the White House. The whole house was light, homey and comfortable, with a quaint touch added of a stained-glass window that filtered the light. In the ex-President's room was the book he was reading, opened to page 229, just where he had left off. The book was titled, "The Battle of Normandy." Perhaps no other First Lady has ever been such a bug on cleanliness. At the White House, she had kept pointing out the dust and the staff would give the rooms another lick and a promise. Eventually she just gave up. "I can't win, Lillian," she would say. "I am surrendering." Her simple, spotless home in Independence was all that the White House could never be.

But I don't mean to imply that Bess Truman was simply a housewife. Far from it. The public never realized the role she played in many of the President's great decisions. The President was always bringing home his important papers and taking Bess with him into his study while he worked. As he himself later admitted, he sought Bess's thinking on every crucial decision—yes, even on whether to drop the first atomic bomb.

There is one final story I remember clearly. When FDR died and Mrs. Truman became First Lady, she had to deal with her predecessor's housekeeper, Mrs. Nesbitt. Mrs. Nesbitt was forever loyal to the Roosevelts. When Bess would ask Mrs. Nesbitt to do something, Mrs. Nesbitt would reply condescendingly, "Mrs. Roosevelt didn't do that." Mrs. Nesbitt had a genius for making the Trumans squirm.

Those who read J. B. West's "Upstairs at the White House" know that Mrs. Nesbitt was finally fired over a stick of butter. But the whole story was not told and I feel I should tell it for history. It shows Bess Truman's character—perhaps better than anything else that happened.

What happened was that Mrs. T. belonged to a Spanish club that met for lunch every week. On this particular week, Bess had been assigned to bring the butter for the luncheon—one stick of butter. It was in the days of World War II rationing.

"He sought Bess's thinking on every crucial decision—yes, even on whether to drop the first atomic bomb."

Being courteous, Mrs. Truman did not just order Mrs. Nesbitt to get the butter. She asked if she might have a stick of butter for the club. Instead of saying, "Yes, of course, Mrs. Truman," the housekeeper said, "No, we've used up almost all our ration stamps already." Mrs. Truman bit her tongue. Then, as she was still smarting from the rebuff, she overheard the social secretary, Mrs. Reathel Odum, ask the housekeeper if she could get her a little "extra butter."

Mrs. Truman almost fainted when she heard Mrs. Nesbitt breezily reply, "Why, child, I can get you all the butter you want."

Bess called her husband, who was in conference in the Oval Office. President Truman had one rule: If his wife called, he was to be disturbed, no matter what.

Truman immediately called the Chief Usher of the White House. "I think it's time to find a new housekeeper," he said. Said the Chief Usher, "That won't be necessary, Mr. President. I have taken care of that already. Mrs. Nesbitt is no longer the housekeeper."

Introducing the most comprehensive study ever done on this vital subject.

HOW TO PREVENT AND TREAT DISORDERS OF THE PROSTATE

HERE'S PRICELESS INFORMATION FOR ANYONE WHO WANTS TO PREVENT PROSTATE DISORDERS— OR CLEAR UP TROUBLES YOU NOW HAVE!

Do you know the odds are 9 to 1 that if you are a man you will have trouble with your prostate . . . that a larger percentage of these troubles will develop into cancer . . . but it is possible to prevent these troubles from arising?

NEVER BEFORE . . . a book that tells so many intimate facts concerning the effects of sex on the prostate gland. Never before a book that can so vitally affect your personal relations.

Old or young, this book may be of vital importance, for it can guide you and help prevent prostate trouble. Some years ago prostate trouble used to be an old man's disease. But today even men in their 30's suffer from prostate and urinary disorders.

YOU NEED THIS INFORMATION! Don't let a troublesome prostate ruin your life. The knowledge contained in this book may bring you HAPPINESS instead of MISERY. Learn the Truth —the Whole Truth—about your Prostate.

Nothing Is Ignored Or Brushed Aside

I devote three vivid chapters to relations and tell you in plain language the effects of various practices on the prostate and ultimately, the health of both the body and mind.

No aspect is taken for granted, no half measures are permitted, and no details are ignored. I feel that the grief, misery and suffering that can result from ignorance or "putting it off" are so tremendous that you cannot afford to delay acquiring the important knowledge contained in this book. YOU NEED TO ACT NOW!

Proved From ACTUAL EXPERIENCE

Unfortunately for me, I am not theorizing. I ran into trouble with my own prostate, and from actual experience ran the gauntlet of Naturopathy, Fasting, Chiropractic, Acupuncture, Herbal Remedies, Medicine, Drugs, and eventually at the end of the line . . . Surgery.

The result is what you have a right to expect . . . the most comprehensive book on the prostate ever written. Yes, more than 400 pages of clear, easy to read type, with detailed explanatory illustrations.

I didn't want others to suffer the way I did, so I put four years of intensive study, research, personal experience and inquiry into the writing of this volume. It is the only book on the Prostate published anywhere that gives you comprehensive information on all known methods of treatment.

Save Yourself Money, Pain, Suffering, Anxiety!

I don't care who you are . . . this book is a "must"! It may be the means of saving you money, pain, suffering and anxiety. It may be of great importance to those who have felt or sensed the early signs of prostate trouble.

Don't let false modesty or fear prevent you from learning the truth. This is not a topic that is to be kept hidden, for prostate trouble is so prevalent and agonizing that no sensible man should be ashamed to face up to the stark reality that some day the horrors of retention of the urine may be his fate.

With my book you can be prepared for this eventuality and know what to do if and when it strikes, thus avoiding agony and danger of permanent kidney injury.

I feel strongly about this because I went through days of indescribable agony and torture. I literally climbed walls. And all this horrible suffering was an effort in futility. Had I known then what I know now, the whole horrible nightmare could have been avoided.

Chinese Sweet and Sour Pork

(In the Year of the Hare)

This week, Food Editor Marilyn Hansen changes the pace and goes Chinese. "Start with an aromatic bowl of Chicken Velvet Soup," says Marilyn, "then proceed to a Szechuan dish from western China: Sweet and Sour Pork. But remember: Szechuan cooking, unlike the more familiar Cantonese cooking, is decidedly hot and peppery!"

Walter Storck

According to the Chinese calendar, this is the Year of the Hare. This little fellow looks as though he's about to sample some Chicken Velvet Soup. In the foreground, Sweet and Sour Pork Szechuan.

Miracle Brand Margarine from Kraft is whipped.

So, whether it's in a big one-pound re-usable bowl or six-stick pound, Miracle spreads like a pound and a half of regular margarine.

Christians to the Lions!

Bent on being rid of the new and strange religion, pagan Romans had a ringing slogan: "Christians to the lions!" But the followers of Christ had other ideas. They knew that Christ had given them a mission in the world, and they were not about to lie down and play dead, even if some of their number were called upon to suffer martyrdom.

They were idealists enough to hold fast to Christ's teaching and realists enough to know the need for self-discipline and organization if their mission were to be effective. Both the idealism and the realism are impressive in early Christian history as it appears in the New Testament and in the writings of later generations. This history and these writings give us reassurance and courage today, when the spirit of pagan Rome is again abroad in the land. We do well to remember Peter and Paul, Clement and Ignatius, and what they said and did.

For a short survey of the early Christian scene, we invite you to write for our free pamphlet, "The Early Years of the Church." No one will call on you.

Warren Beatty

Talks About Privacy, Marriage, Kids, Himself

By Helen Dorsey

"I think I function more clearly when people resist my ideas. I rather like that because I'm going to do what I want to anyway!"

In person, 37-year-old Warren Beatty was a far cry from his famous cinematic image. He was haggard-looking, overtired from the strain of a succession of 18-hour working days. He wore rumpled clothes—an open-necked shirt, "tired" slacks and belted sport jacket. Despite his reputation for unwillingness to be interviewed, he was unusually cooperative, patient and willing to talk about his personal life. I was amazed by the flow of his energy and his powers of concentration. These are the highlights of our conversation, taped over a 24-hour period:

FAMILY WEEKLY: Did you used to be uptight about the press?

BEATTY: No, but I was offended by the economics of it. I didn't feel that people really wanted to know about me, and I didn't feel that it was important to do an interview with me. The writers who talked with me were usually intelligent people, and I thought they were a little embarrassed at being assigned to do a story on somebody who didn't really stimulate them.

FW: Producing films is a tremendous amount of work. Why do you do it?

BEATTY: Because, as the producer, you control your movie. Once in a while, you want to do something exactly the way you think it should be done. My role is to see that the picture is done as well as it can be.

FW: How do you create an atmosphere in which people want to participate?

BEATTY: You listen to people. You show a certain amount of flexibility, which happens when you really listen to people. And you don't fall prey to what they call the one-man "auteur" theory of making films. You acknowledge the fact that this is a medium of collectivity, one that requires the efforts of a lot of people working together. Sometimes you get more involved in great expenditures of energy and diplomacy, but that's a healthy situation. I think I function more clearly when people resist my ideas. I rather like that because I'm going to do what I want to anyway!

FW: Freedom of choice seems particularly important to you.

BEATTY: Isn't it important to everybody? But maybe you're right. I have never been under contract to anybody. I bought myself back from MGM because I didn't want to be told what to do, and I had the feeling they were going to tell me what to do, or at least try to!

FW: How do you react to being called a sex symbol?

BEATTY: I've never minded that at all! [Laughs uproariously] I don't find it embarrassing. Maybe at one time I did. I think it's ridiculous, but it's sort of flattering!

FW: Why did you turn down ten football scholarships to study speech at Northwestern?

BEATTY: Because I didn't want to get my teeth pushed down my throat! Also, football took so much energy that I didn't have any energy left for anything else.

FW: What were you looking for?

BEATTY: I wanted to direct in the theater, but I went to New York to study acting because I thought that was the foundation of the theater.

FW: Why did you need to become an actor?

BEATTY: I just thought it was a perfect way to make a lot of money! I don't think I ever had a great need to be a great actor. I think that's been borne out by the past 15 years. I could have done 40 or 60 movies, but I've done 14!

FW: Would you ever seek political office?

BEATTY: Not now, but I'd be silly to rule it out for the future.

FW: Is it true you once said: "I don't know if I'm generous enough to run for political office?" What did you mean?

"I don't know that marriage and commitment necessarily go hand in hand. After all, most of my friends have been married many times and there didn't seem to be any commitment involved there!"

BEATTY: Yes, it's true. I meant that the egotistical gratification that comes to a person like me in public life, through recognition, is satisfied in movies. And there's so much abuse that a person takes in pursuit of a political career, I don't think I could tolerate that now.

FW: Are you shy?

BEATTY: Shyness is not necessarily a virtue, is it? I think shyness has more to do with vanity than anything else.

FW: Do you have any fears in your life?

BEATTY: Fears? Yeah, I have a lot of fears. I have a fear of lack of privacy, and I have a fear of going into my fears.

FW: Do you seek anyone's guidance?

BEATTY: I can't honestly say that I seek anyone's guidance at this point, other than my own, but I have a number of friends whose opinions I respect. It would depend on what I had a question about. But I think I might ask my mother and my sister [Shirley MacLaine] and my father about a given issue. Did you see Shirley dance on her special? Wasn't she something? [Smiles]

FW: Are you ever lonely?

BEATTY: Occasionally, but not at the moment. Being alone is fine, but to be lonely implies some kind of unhappiness. I think spending a certain amount of time alone is important to clarify your thinking.

FW: How do you accomplish that?

BEATTY: By going off in a car or to my house. Change is more relaxing for me than anything else—change of environment, or change of activity. Then a whole different set of impulses comes into play.

FW: Money seems unimportant to you.

BEATTY: Once you have money, it becomes less important, but if you don't have money, it's very important.

FW: How much do you value material things?

SUPERFROG!

MURDERS SUPER BASS!

"I couldn't believe my eyes as I hauled big bass aboard."

"More strikes . . . more fish landed . . . bigger bass caught when not striking for anyone else on the lake!"

by John Fox
The American Angler

I'd heard about Bill Plummer's rubber BASS FROG lure: the frog that murders bass! Fishermen friends told me how they caught such giant bass . . . so often . . . so fast . . . that it changed their fishing lives.

Then, I tried BASS FROG myself. I was amazed how this life-like rubber frog got strikes so fast that many times I was not even prepared to set my hook. I was so impressed with BASS FROG that I had Bill on my television show and told everybody about my fantastic luck with BASS FROG. We even showed films of Bill and me landing 3, 4 and 6 lb. bass with BASS FROG. I was sold on BASS FROG.

JOHN FOX
• 8 Times National Bass Fishing Champion • 1972 Champion of Champions • Star of "The American Angler" Television Show.

Then Bill Sent Me a Few Samples of SUPERFROG!

First I was just downright skeptical. How could Bill improve on BASS FROG. When I got the Samples, I had to admit that they looked good. The Perma Gloss skin that covered the new PVC body was dappled and green . . . just like the real McCoy. The legs were more life-like and the hook was longer and sharper. But these changes were cosmetic . . . they didn't necessarily make it a better plug.

15 Minutes Changed My Mind About SUPERFROG!

The true test of a lure is in the water. I went out to the nearest lake and cast out one of my SUPERFROGS . . . POW . . . SPLASH!!!—the exploding commotion of the lure landing and a monster 8 lb. lunker striking savagely . . . SIMULTANEOUSLY . . . at SUPERFROG! I couldn't believe my eyes as I hauled the big bass on board. Just luck, I thought. But, 15 minutes later I had four more lunkers, all averaging between 4 and 8 lbs. Not only that, I found SUPERFROG to be in perfect condition . . . even after the savage beating it had taken.

Anybody Can Have A Good Day I Thought . . .

I was amazed with SUPERFROG. But, fishing can be that way. Good one day and Zilch the next. I kept fishing for three more hours. My total catch for the day: 17 big lunker Bass (caught and released)!!! I did not take this at face value. I kept trying SUPERFROG at different times . . . on different bodies of water . . . on big open lakes . . . in marsh ridden impoundments . . . in tiny, hard to get ponds . . . AND EVERYWHERE IT WAS THE SAME . . . SUPERFROG CAUGHT SUPERBASS . . . time after time . . . more often . . . faster . . . even than Bill Plummer's rubber Bass Frog that I found so successful before!

You Must Be Satisfied Or No Cost!

Try SUPERFROG at our risk. Fish the worst weed trap areas you know. . . . Where bass have been caught but where more often you lost your plug. . . . Try for six full months. Unless delighted, return for full refund.

Supply is Limited!

As you probably know, the plastics industry is presently suffering from severe shortages. Our current supply is limited.

However, the demand is great. So act today and order while the supply lasts. Rush coupon below.

Why SUPERFROG Casts Safely Into Thickest Weeds

2. Bulb deflector "hops" frog over stumps and branches.
3. Resilient flexible wire keeps guard aligned, wards off obstructions.

Bill Plummer, New England's Most Famous Bass Fisherman, on SUPERFROG!

"I guess I'm just a perfectionist. I knew that my BASS FROG was a good fishcatcher. SUPERFROG is just the result of my long years of fishing and my constant reworking of the original BASS FROG design. My aim has always been to create a bass plug that was so good that anybody could use it . . . even a beginner . . . and come to learn and love the thrills of catching monster bass."

bought since I was a kid. It's a Mercedes coupe. I bought my house because I like the house. I've been looking for that particular kind of house for a long time, and I finally found it. It's sort of a 1930-ish house. It has an art deco quality about it. It would have been very much out of fashion ten years ago, but now it seems to be very much in fashion! I like it because it has a large degree of privacy. It's on a hill. It was in bad enough shape so that I could sort of make it my own when I fixed it up.

FW: Does the house give you a feeling of permanence?

BEATTY: I've always found living in a hotel was as permanent as anything else. To me, it's like we're all kind of renting whatever we own anyway. The house I own was owned by somebody who died, and was owned before that by somebody else who died. And, evidently, it was permanent for both of them! [Laughs]

FW: How do you feel about privacy?

BEATTY: I think any actor who says privacy is terribly important to him has got to be a little crazy. I've always found that if you truly want to be private, you can do it. Nobody's that interested. But if you're torn about it—if you want privacy but don't really want to lose all that notoriety—it produces schizophrenia. I think you see that very often among actors.

FW: Isn't that true of many public figures as well?

BEATTY: Well, yes, a politician seems to have to lead a certain life-style that is acceptable to the voter, no matter what his own life-style really is. People are so battered by the dishonesties of politicians that they seem to be really thrilled by candor from anyone in politics. When Wilbur Mills finally said, "Look, I'm an alcoholic. I have been behaving like a fool because I'm an alcoholic, but I'm going to change," how can you not be in his corner? But it would be very difficult for me to change my life-style just so I could get elected to office.

FW: What about marriage? Does the idea of commitment bother you?

BEATTY: No. I'm not antagonistic to the idea of marriage, and I don't really resist the idea of commitment. But I don't know that marriage and commitment necessarily go hand in hand. After all, most of my friends have been married many times and there didn't seem to be any commitment involved there! I have been committed to people, but to me, the public spectacle of marriage is embarrassing. But if someone wanted to marry me very badly, I would probably marry. I think there is a lot of excitement in the idea of monogamy.

FW: You think it's possible to be monogamous?

BEATTY: Yes, sure. I think it takes a lot of intelligence and a lot of discipline and a lot of intensity, but I also don't consider the absence of monogamy something to be afraid of.

FW: Would you like to have children?

BEATTY: I love children. I think there will always be enough children around so that I don't have to have them myself, but there is a feeling children give you that you can't get anywhere else! That's a very selfish point of view; I would dread the possessiveness that I know I would feel because my children's lives were not mine. I feel very much at ease with, and very attracted to, other people's children! I have often thought I'm better with other people's children than I would be with my own.

FW: What qualities do you value in a woman?

BEATTY: The same qualities I like in men! The quality of honesty is the most important quality to me, in men or women. And a sense of art, which is part of honesty. I admire a sense of right and wrong.

On being a sex symbol: "It's ridiculous, but it's sort of flattering."

Globe Photos

On running for office: "I'd be silly to rule it out for the future."

"If someone wanted to marry me very badly, I would probably marry. I think there is a lot of excitement in the idea of monogamy."

What in the World!

WILT CHAMBERLAIN
Height wasn't always an asset

QUOTE: "There are certain disadvantages to being tall, of course, particularly when you're young and your body is growing faster than your ability to cope with the situations that growth creates. I used to get frustrated when I was about seven years old and I'd go to the movies with my friends and they'd get in for children's prices and I had to pay adult prices—which you weren't supposed to pay until you were 11. The woman in the ticket booth knew my family and all, but she figured I had to be older because I was bigger. I also remember one time when I was in the sixth or seventh grade and about five of us kids climbed up on the roof of a trolley-car barn and someone called the cops. . . . The police just took it for granted that because I was the biggest, I must be the ringleader. Actually, I was the youngest one there, and I'd just gone along with what the other guys wanted to do." From "Wilt: Just Like Any Other 7-Foot Millionaire Who Lives Next Door," by Wilt Chamberlain and David Shaw (Warner Paperback Library, $1.95). UNQUOTE.

THE MILKMAN FLYETH
No more horse and wagon

It would never do in large cities, but in the country where there are wide-open spaces, this new type of milk wagon may be just the thing. It all began in England when a group of hovercraft enthusiasts decided to combine their hobby with their profession. The result was a flying milkman. Actually, the fiber-glass hovercraft can be built by anyone who has the time, money and know-how. The machine travels at 45 miles an hour, sitting on a 5/16-inch cushion of air. But until hovercraft are licensed for road travel, cars and trucks will probably continue to rule the highways. Anyway, there are few places left in America where people still receive milk from the milkman and not from the supermarket.

Popular culture doesn't reflect the mood of the people any more says Donna Fargo, country-western superstar and Grammy Award winner. "With inflation and unemployment rising, who needs to see a movie with an unhappy ending or listen to a depressing song? We are not psychologically prepared to hear any more gloomy predictions. I think that's why my recording of 'The Happiest Girl in the Whole U.S.A.' was such a best seller." Donna just might have a point—discussions are now taking place about using that platinum recording or her recent hit "U.S. of A." as the Miss U.S.A. pageant's theme song.

A Special Announcement For Collectors and Investors From The Hamilton Mint

"NORMAN ROCKWELL'S 12 BEST-LOVED POST COVERS"

A NEW LIMITED EDITION OF PROOF FINISH SOLID SILVER INGOTS ONLY 10,000 SETS—WHEN THESE ARE GONE, THERE'LL BE NO MORE!

A Strictly Limited First Edition Proof Set of 12 Ingots in .999 Fine Silver only $13.75 per Ingot.

For over 40 years, Norman Rockwell chronicled America and Americans in a series of memorable covers for The Saturday Evening Post. Since 1916, Rockwell's cover art has lovingly and authentically depicted a colorful pageant of life in America from an age of innocence until the present.

As a permanent tribute to this unique individual and to America, The Hamilton Mint, by exclusive permission from The Saturday Evening Post is extremely proud to present a significant new medallic series — The Norman Rockwell Best-Loved "Post" Cover Collection.

EXQUISITELY CRAFTED WORKS OF FINE ART

With this announcement, you now have the opportunity to obtain this superb collection of 12 solid silver ingots, each one illustrating one of Rockwell's best-loved "Post" covers. Each will be a striking example of the minter's art and faithfully capture the flavor of the Rockwell original. Each gleaming ingot will contain one ounce (480 grains) of .999 fine silver, the finest and purest available.

The ingots will be issued on a convenient one-a-month basis over a 12 month period. At that time, subscribers will have amassed a total of 5,760 grains of silver, more than the average person accumulates in a lifetime.

A STRICTLY LIMITED FIRST EDITION

This "Post" Cover Collection will be a first edition and quite rare. Only one proof set will be issued to each subscriber, and to further enhance the exclusivity of the offering, this edition is limited to just 10,000 sets. After those subscriptions have been filled, the minting dies will be destroyed to safeguard the integrity of the edition.

YOUR PERSONAL SERIAL NUMBER

Each ingot will bear your own personal serial number. Serial numbers will be assigned in the order applications are received, the lower and potentially most desirable numbers going to the earliest subscribers. Each ingot will also bear The Hamilton Mint Hallmark.

You will also be issued a Certificate of Authenticity, attesting to the limited edition status and precious metal content of your ingots.

INVESTMENT POTENTIAL

This collection is certain to be treasured by knowledgeable collectors for its rarity, great beauty and inherent value.

The opportunity to acquire this series in precious metal also comes at a time when prominent advisors are predicting a continued rise in the price of precious metals in the years ahead.

SIGNIFICANT ORIGINAL PRICE GUARANTEE

Under the terms of this offer, The Hamilton Mint is officially committed to deliver to you at the original issue price of $13.75 each, the complete set of 12 ingots over a 12 month period, regardless of how high the price of silver and gold climbs. The Hamilton Mint does reserve the right to limit the edition below the published maximum limits, but once your application is validated and accepted, your subscription is guaranteed.

Please remember that there is a strict limit of 10,000 proof sets, so prompt action is essential if you wish to be included.

SPECIAL DISPLAY CASE FREE

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

"WHY IS THE SINK PIPE CURVED?"

THE LOOP OF PIPE YOU SEE UNDER A SINK IS CALLED A WATER TRAP. EVERY SINK, TUB AND TOILET IN YOUR HOUSE HAS ONE. THE DIRTY WATER THAT GOES DOWN THE SEWER DECAYS AND GIVES OFF A BAD-SMELLING GAS CALLED SEWER GAS. WHEN YOU PULL THE PLUG IN A SINK, THE DIRTY WATER DRAINS THROUGH THE WATER TRAP. SOME OF THE WATER STAYS IN THE BOTTOM OF THE LOOP. THE WATER FORMS A WATER SEAL THAT STOPS THE SMELLY SEWER GAS FROM COMING BACK INTO THE HOUSE.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY—Here's a make-it-yourself gift item: A holder for notes, letters, etc. Use a clip clothespin with a strip of black and red felt glued to the back of the pin. Glue on ears of black felt and a tongue of red. Add small glass eyes and glue on ice cream sticks for legs. Paint to suit. Glue on two more sticks (like skis) so it stands up better.—GEORGIA

DEAR POLLY — The men in my family do not use pajama tops. I find it much cheaper to buy boxer shorts than to buy the regular short pajamas. — ROSE.

Polly pays $1.00 for every idea used. Send them to her, % this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY—Unravel an old sweater and have yards and yards of curly wool "hair" to use on dolls, animals or other toys you may be making. —L.A.S.

DEAR POLLY — If you think the flash cube mechanism on a camera is worn-out and needs replacement, scrape off the black corrosion on the contact points till they are shiny and see if this will fix it. — PAMELA.

DEAR POLLY — When I wear polyester pants with polyester socks they sometimes stick together, so I wet my hands with water and rub along my socks. The sticking ends. — JOAN.

DEAR POLLY — When going on a very long car trip we always carry along some pillows. I put several clean, older slips on each one. Four or five on one pillow is not too many. When the pillowcases need changing I just pull off the soiled one and put it in the laundry bag. — MRS. W.S.

DEAR POLLY — I keep a dinner-guest diary to avoid repeats as to food served at previous parties. I also make note of likes and dislikes, allergies and so on. I once read, "Entertaining is handing out love and friendship." My system deepens that feeling. — JANE.

DEAR POLLY — Getting children off to school in the morning can get pretty hectic. Many mothers have to make trips to school to take forgotten lunches, milk money, etc. I put all the school items for the day in a shallow cardboard box right by the door. A quick check as the kids leave means no more forgotten items. — BEVERLY.

DEAR POLLY—Nuts are now so expensive (what isn't?) so I have discovered a way to "stretch" chopped nut meats. While making fudge recently I stretched the nuts by adding a few crumbled corn flakes and the result was most gratifying.—J.F.
